some show of reason. On the morning after the affray, it is reported that BROCKETT was conveyed out of town in a covered carriage, by two of the leading Pro-Slavery men of Lecompton. BAILEY and all his relatives are Free-State men, and as his case created intense sympathy among the Free-State residents of Lecompton, and the surrounding neighborhood, it was naturally to be expected that the ill-feeling towards BROCKETT would extend to the abettors of his escape. Hence, when it was rumored, a night or two ago, that he was about to return to Lecompton, the excitement among BAILEY's friends became so unbounded, that fears were entertained not only for BROCKETT's life, if he dared to make his appearance, but for the safety of the man who had hastened his flight. At least such is the information conveyed to me, and I see no reason to question its accuracy.

The two thousand troops ordered by Government to replace those sent out from Kansas to Utah are rapidly arriving, and will all be available for service on election day. Governor WALKER is now in Fort Leavenworth making arrangements for their arrival, and providing for their subsequent disposal.

A meeting was held last night at Wyandott, which was addressed, in an able speech, by Mr. Secretary STANTON. The eloquent gentleman endeavored to convince the people that the slavery question ought to be ignored in the October election; but, whilst his speech is regarded as having given the utmost satisfaction by the moderation of its tone, the soundness of its argument and the good sense which characterized it as a whole, yet the general belief, especially among his political opponents, is that he failed to impress them with the propriety of rejecting the slavery issue.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION—MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

From the St. Louis Republican.

LAWRENCE, Sunday, Sept. 20.

The whole tone of the document is pacific, and its tendency will be to allay the sectional strife and embittered feeling which has existed so long in the Territory. It is considered to be just to all parties, but the Free State party receive it as a great concession in their favor. Many of them are already admitting that they have been unjust to the Governor, and have been too distrustful of him.

Soon after the Governor left Lawrence, we had one of those episodes so common in this city. It seems that some weeks ago, Mr. BROWN, of the Herald of Freedom, requested a young man, a printer, I believe, in the Lawrence Republican office, to keep away from his office, alleging as a cause, insulting and vulgar language used by him in the hearing of some ladies, clerks in his office. To-day, the young man entered the office, claiming he had some business with one of the attaches. Mr. B. being present, ordered the printer down stairs, but he refused to comply with the request. Mr. BROWN gave him a push and followed him to the bottom of the stairs. Both parties appeared greatly excited. BROWN started to go up stairs, when the printer caught up a heavy piece of board, and was in the act of hurling it at him, when the former drew a small pocket-pistol and snapped it at the latter. A crowd immediately gathered, and the excitement was quite high. The printer procured a Colt's revolver, and made several ineffectual attempts to fire at BROWN, but the latter closed his door, and soon after the crowd dispersed. Many censured BROWN, and a few justified him, but Mr. B. had the manliness to join so heartily in censuring himself as any person could do. He stated that threats of assassination were hanging over him from several individuals, and that the action, language and threats of the young man, and the hostile attitude of the moment threw him off his guard, and the pistol was snapped without thinking of the consequences. The printer's name is BROWN. He threatens to shoot his namesake, and many are apprehensive it will be done before many days elapse.

A bad state of society exists here. The Herald of Freedom has taken a very conservative course this season; has opposed all row, violence and crime; has sustained Gov. WALKER, as far as was consistent with the editor's Free-State views, and urged the people to participate in all future elections under Territorial authority. This has been construed into a crime, and many of the desperadoes are resolved to get him out of the way, even at the cost of his life.

With our party there has been a division of late, many hesitating to sustain Ex-Governor REMBOE for Congress, but I am sure we shall present a united front on election day, and should not be greatly disappointed should he be elected. It was supposed there would be a division in the Free-State ranks, but present appearances do not favor the idea.

Truly yours,

THE SUBMISSION OF THE CONSTITUTION TO THE PEOPLE—VIEWS OF DELEGATES.

General CALHOUN, the President of the Constitutional Convention, has caused the following card to be published to show his own position, in regard to the submission of the Constitution of Kansas to the popular vote:

To the Democratic Voters of Douglas County:

It having been stated by that Abolition newspaper, the Herald of Freedom, and by some disaffected bogus Democrats, who have got up an independent ticket for the purpose of securing the vote of the Black Republicans, that the regular nominees of the Democratic Convention were opposed to submitting the Constitution to the people. We, the candidates of the Democratic Party, submit the following resolutions, which were adopted by the Democratic Convention which placed us in nomination, and which we fully and heartily indorse, as a complete refutation of the slander above alluded to.

JOHN CALHOUN,
A. W. JONES,
W. S. WELLS,
H. BUTCHER,
L. S. BOLING,
JOHN M. WALLACE,
WM. T. SPICELY,
L. A. FRATHER.

LECOMPTON, K. T., June 13, 1857.

Resolved, That we will support no man as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, whose duty it will be to frame the Constitution of the future State of Kansas, and mould the political institutions under which we, as a people, are to live, unless he pledge himself fully, freely, and unreservedly, to use every honorable means to submit the same to every bona fide actual citizen of Kansas at the proper time for the purpose of having the same ratified or rejected by the people, in order that the said Constitution may be adopted or rejected by the actual settlers in this Territory, as a majority of the voters may decide.

News from Buenos Ayres.

ABOLITION OF THE PASSPORT SYSTEM—RAILROAD ENTERPRISES—EXPLORATION OF THE SALADO—SHIPWRECK—REVOLUTIONARY SYMPTOMS—AFFAIRS IN MONTEVIDEO.

We have received, by the bark Antagonist, advices from Buenos Ayres to the 14th of August.

The passport system had been abolished by the House of Representatives, and it was expected that the measure would soon be confirmed by the Senate.

The Government of Buenos Ayres were proposing to extend the Western Railroad to Moron, and to build another from the Capital to San Fernando. The formation of other lines was also contemplated.

In reference to the exploration of the Salado, we find the following paragraph in the British Packet, of the 6th of August:

"It appears that the adventurous expedition has encountered some difficulties, not from want of water, which is the usual complaint in such cases, but from its superabundance. The current is so strong, in consequence of the swollen state of the river, that the small steamers make little progress in stemming it, and the banks are overflooded to such an extent, that it is difficult to keep or discover its ordinary channel.

Here, then, is a formal and eloquent appeal in favor of systematic arrangements for the navigation of this stream."

A petition was in the course of signature in Buenos Ayres, requesting the Government to suspend the law declaring foreign coins to be a legal tender.

On the 23d of July, during a thick fog, the British bark Wreck of the Wave, from Liverpool for Montevideo, with a cargo of coals, struck on the English Bank, and must have sustained serious damage in the hull, for though got off by the exertions of the Captain and crew, she sank shortly after in deep water, and became a total wreck. No lives lost; the Captain and crew having arrived safe at Montevideo on the 31st of July.

In the Province under the rule of Gen. URQUIZA there had been disturbances. Revolutions in San Juan, Tucuman and Salta had been suppressed, but the papers state that a general feeling of dissatisfaction is apparent, and that the opposition to URQUIZA grows stronger every day.

The frontier Indians, lately threatening to invade Buenos Ayres, had fallen to fighting among themselves.

From Montevideo we have dates to Aug. 14. The Republic was distracted by the intrigues of OZIMA and his partisans. The newspaper discussions were very violent. The editor of one of the papers opposed to OZIMA had been attacked by an assassin. On the 1st of August a man was found with his throat cut, near OZIMA's country house.

The yellow fever had entirely disappeared.

Efforts of the Treasury Department to relieve the Money Pressure—Seizure of Gunpowder in a Mormon Train—Central American Affairs—Pensions, &c.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Treasury Department is still engaged doing all it can in a legitimate way to relieve the money pressure. Applications for the redemption of a large amount of United States Stocks are steadily on the increase.

United States Stocks amounting to $400,000 were received here to-day for redemption.

Orders were sent from the Treasury Department to-day, to the New-York Assay Office, for the transfer of the large amount of Bullion there to the Philadelphia Mint, to be coined into small pieces, to meet the pressing demands of business.

A letter received to-day, dated Fort Kearney, Sept. 5, states that two companies of troops arrived there on that day, en route to Salt Lake, and that the 5th and 10th Regiments had reached Fort Laramie. Colonel HOFFMAN had seized five hundred kegs of gunpowder in a Mormon train. Returning Californians informed the writer of the letter, that the Mormons were making preparations for a fight, and did not conceal their hostile movements. Elder KIMBALL in a sermon which he delivered in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake, had said he could with his wives whip the 2,500 troops, and afterwards do a good day's work on his farm in the afternoon. He further remarked that the provisions for the army would reach the Valley, but that the troops would never enter Salt Lake City.

The Administration has not yet received any definite information from WM. CAREY JONES relative to the political affairs of Nicaragua, while certain parties are strongly urging recognition by the President of the Minister from that country, and rival interests are endeavoring to prevent it.

Mr. MOLINA, Minister from Costa Rica, claims that his Government has something to say about the Transit route, but it is known that the Administration does not respect that assumption.

The whole number of warrants issued from the Pension Office during September, under the Bounty Land act of March 3, 1855, was 1,026, to satisfy which nearly 245,000 acres are necessary.

The names of fifty-five thousand and ninety pensioners for Revolutionary services, have been placed on the rolls since March, 1818, but on the 30th of June last only three hundred and forty-six of this number were reported living.

WM. PITT PRATT has been appointed Postmaster at Plattsburg, New-York, in place of MOORES, resigned. Gen. WM. WALKER's sword was sent to him this morning by express.

A large number of strangers have come in on the evening trains, and the promise is that to-morrow will be a great day.

The exhibition to-morrow embraces matched horses, colts, fancy matches, stallions from five to seven years old, and family horses.

The entries of matched horses are large.

The mares Highland Maid, Sontag, and Pocahontas are also here.

A trial of speed will take place between Flora Temple and Lancet on Saturday afternoon.

The exhibition will continue through the week.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting in St. John's Church.

The Annual Convention of the Episcopal Church of the Diocese of New-York was opened on Wednesday morning with Divine Service in St. John's Church.

The proceedings commenced by a voluntary on the organ, Dr. HOWES presiding.

The creed was then recited by Rev. Dr. PYNE, of Albany, and the remainder including the litany, by Rev. Dr. W. F. MORGAN, of St. Thomas' Church, in this City. The first lesson was read by Rev. J. E. FLOOD, of Brooklyn, and the second by Rev. Mr. BRINNSWILLOW. The Nicene creed was recited.

The usual psalms and hymns were chanted and sung by the choir and congregation. The Venite, Benedicite, Morte Patris, Te Deum Laudamus, and the Benedictus. After the Litany, Rev. Mr. WEBSTER gave out the first three verses of the 100th hymn in the Selection. The ante-communion service was said by Right Rev. the Provisional Bishop of the Diocese, Bishop PETTIS of New-York, the responses at the end of each of the commandments being chanted. The Epistle was read by Rev. Dr. BREWER, and the Gospel by Right Rev. Bishop KIPP of California, the choir chanting the Gloria.

The Collect was that for the 16th Sunday after Trinity. Four verses of the 25th hymn were then given out by Rev. Mr. WEBSTER, and sung by the choir, the clerical delegation in the body of the church, and the visitors in the galleries.

Bishop KIPP then ascended the pulpit and preached a carefully worded and evangelical sermon from the 8th verse of the 18th chapter of the Gospel according to St. Luke: "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith in the earth?"

The Bishop observed, that Christ was anticipating in these words, through the vista of time, his second coming. Should we be able individually to abide the scrutiny of his coming? Such thoughts were naturally suggested by this, the anniversary festival of the Church.

He spoke of the religion of the mere intellect, and demonstrated that it was only the religion of the regenerated heart that would be found to be of the least avail at that great day. Intellect was not excluded from our religious conceptions, but standing apart in its exercise from all that was necessarily associated with it in the truly awakened soul, it was merely as the cold moonlight as contrasted with the warm beams of the vivifying sun. The religion of the mere imagination, however poetic and beautiful, was equally worthless for all practical purposes. It would neither reform the heart nor purify the life. Such religion was only a splendid dream. It had no relation to the formation of "a new creature" in Christ Jesus.

One test of the reality of a Christian profession might be found in what men are disposed to sacrifice for God. Alas! many were sufficiently ready to make any sacrifice but the one demanded from them, the pride of an unrenewed intellect and of an unchanged heart.

There was another perversion of true faith, namely the religion of mere feeling. The proof of our sincerity was not excitement of mind but in living "soberly and righteously before God." Some men think it easy work to pass the line which divides the living from the dead. Is it possible for those who have long been the servants of sin to possess in an instant spirituality of heart? The faith of such men was one of sitful impulses, now rapt in ecstacies, again enveloped in uncertainty and doubt. The infidel rejoices over such, the self-deceived persons who without being hypocrites have really felt a true religious emotion, but when feeling subsided, have in some moment of temptation been found wanting even in common honesty.

The Bishop alluded to the case of the poet COWPER. Who would doubt the religious character of that man? A weakened system and a clouded mind produced all the sadness and doubts and sorrow which characterized his history. But where in Scripture was feeling laid down as the true test of spiritual character? High states of feeling may be associated with true religion, but they are no proofs of our safety or of the reality of a transforming and saving change. A new and abiding principle of action was the safest test; without discarding the influence of imagination or denying the employment of the intellect, it sanctifies and employs them both. The hour which shall try every man's work is hastening on, and ministers and people were equally subject to the same cautions. Looking to the solemnities of the last great day, how necessary that even the servants of the Lord, who have charge of the souls of others, should not themselves be found wanting.

At the close of the sermon, a collection was made in behalf of the Diocesan Missions. The offertory was read by Rev. Dr. HAWKS, of Astoria; the prayer for the church militant by Rev. Dr. BROWN, of Newburgh. The communion service was conducted by Rev. Dr. CREMINSON, and the post communion by Rev. Dr. MCVICKAR, the absolution and blessing being uttered by the Provisional Bishop. The floor of the church was nearly filled by the communicants.

Following the directions of the rubric, the bread and wine were distributed in the first instance to the superior clergy—first to the Bishop of California, by the Provisional Bishop of New-York, who subsequently distributed the bread; next, to the eleven clergymen within the rails of the altar and at the reading-desk, the Bishop of California distributing the wine. The elements were then given to the clergy and laity members of the Convention in the body of the church, by the two Bishops, assisted by Rev. Dr. BREWER, Rev. Dr. CREMINSON, and several others.

When the religious services of the day were concluded, a platform was constructed before the altar, and the business of the Convention was entered upon. The Right Rev. the Provisional Bishop occupied the Chair, Rev. Dr. EDGERSTON acting as Secretary. Spectators in great numbers, mostly ladies, occupied the galleries.

The Secretary called over the names of the clergy, many of whom did not answer. He then called over the list of the Churches in the diocese. Several delegates came forward, presenting their credentials, which were examined by Hon. LUTHER BRADISH and Mr. DUNHAM.

The names of the delegates from each Church were next called. Some time was expended in this way, but nearly all the diocesan Churches were promptly represented. A slight irregularity in the return from one or two Churches was noticed by the scrutators, and reported by the Secretary to the Chairman.

A quorum being present, the meeting was declared open for business.

Dr. EDGERSTON moved that Right Reverend the Bishop of California, Dr. KIPP, be invited to take a seat by the side of the Chairman. It was so resolved.

It was moved and carried, that Rev. Dr. FOLEY, one of the Professors in the University of Dublin, be also invited to take a seat near the Chairman.

On the motion of Rev. Dr. HAWKS, Rev. Dr. EDGERSTON was appointed permanent Secretary; and on motion of Rev. Dr. HAWKS, Rev. Mr. ROSS was appointed Treasurer of the Convention.

The following standing Committees were announced by the President, and the Convention adjourned until 9 o'clock on Thursday morning.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Points Advanced by the Ministers of the Central American States for the Prevention of Filibustering.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, Sept. 29, 1857.

The Ministers of the Central American States are waiting successfully to urge an honest representation of filibuster ventures, representing to General CASS in strong written and oral language the imperative duty of our Government to put a stop to the dishonorable proceedings intended to be repeated by WILLIAM WALKER and confederates against the peace of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

It is here declared insufficient to tell the officers of the law, District Attorneys, &c., to use all lawful means to prevent the departure of invasive expeditions.

Granted that our citizens have (as is claimed for them by General CASS) the right to cast aside all allegiance due to the United States, it is contended that such allegiance cannot be put aside by a citizen just as it is the accepted citizen of another country. Therefore Mr. Cass finds Costa Rica, San Salvador and Guatemala require our Government to seize these expeditionists wherever found, and to bring them to the United States for trial.

Costa Rica, Guatemala, and San Salvador, deny citizenship to foreigners coming in armed with arms under the false pretence of being emigrants. Emigrants arriving in these United States are not permitted to become citizens thereof except with permission, by due course of law, preliminary residence, &c. They do not acquire nor pretend to a right of citizenship by force of arms or violence. The Ministers representative of the Central American States ask, then, of the Government of the United States that protection under treaties which those States are never unwilling to concede under treaties with the United States.

It is urged that the citizen of the United States possesses no claim to and cannot enjoy as real, a false throwing off of fealty as a cloak to perpetrate certain crimes against a friendly Power with the view to resume citizenship on a return to his own country after non-success in that which he may have invaded. The citizen of the United States must always be such until he (as already stated) is lawfully accepted (adopted) the citizen of another Government. The Government of Washington, then, really and truly desirous to put an end forever to dishonorable attack of friendly nations by expeditions from the United States, will, at once, perceive the reasonableness, propriety, and justice—at the solicitation of threatened Governments—of capturing all engaged in such enterprises when beyond the jurisdiction of the United States with the view to bring them within such jurisdiction for trial under the law of the United States for the breach thereof.

Unless some such honorable steps be promptly taken by the government of the United States the Central American Governments will be in self-defence constrained to deny entry to vessels of every nation which may have professed emigrants on board, armed, and to require of their respective consular agents in foreign countries to refuse clearances to vessels having arms or armed passengers—so will the United States and every other Government more readily be aware of the emigration which the Central American States decline to receive. Friendly governments cannot undertake to force unfriendly immigration upon friendly States. The Central American States desire no immigrants but such as may therein be disposed to settle peaceably as the emigrants from Europe do in the United States.

The Government of the United States, acting in behalf, is responsible for the doings of its citizens, and owes to every Power with which it may be at peace a just protection from, and compensation for, every illegal overt act of the citizens, from the commencement thereof to its consummation. Hence the duty of prevention.

The Central American States, having already, then, been put to large war expenses, and much national inconvenience and trouble, by unlawful expeditions from the United States, after the mercy shown, and the generous interference permitted by an armed vessel of the United States for the preservation of the chief of the offenders, after sliding in their escape from condign punishment, the Government of the United States cannot and will not sanction a repetition of their crimes, but for the satisfaction of the States of Central America, and for the honor of the United States, and the whole of the citizens thereof, will adopt such action as is herein solicited for the total suppression of the grievous evils complained of, and in behalf of a universal national tranquillity.

The Trial of Cangemi for Anderson's Murder—The Jury Still Out—No Chance of their agreeing.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

Before Hon. Judge Roosevelt.

At the assembling of the Court yesterday, the Jury sent word to the Judge that they had been in conference all night, and had failed to agree. They requested to be allowed to examine the minutes of the rag-picker's evidence. This was granted by consent of counsel for defence and prosecution.

In about an hour the Jury again sent a request to be allowed to read the evidence of the colored woman who saw the pistol fired. The District-Attorney, however, refused his consent. He thought that the first request of the Jury ought to be granted, because there was a discrepancy between the evidence given by the witness before the Coroner and that which he gave before the Court. But he (the District-Attorney) strongly objected to going any further in that direction. If evidence was thus allowed to go to the Jury-room by piecemeal, every Juror would be entitled to call for testimony of some one witness, and the whole day would be taken up retrying the case. He thought it was no more than just to accede to the first application, but he objected to any further testimony going to the Jury-room.

The time stole slowly on, the room being oppressively crowded. When the City Hall bell tolled forth the hour of noon, Judge ROOSEVELT started from the sleep he had fallen into over his newspaper, and said he would take a recess of one hour. When he reentered the Court-room, shortly after 1 o'clock, the Jury again sent word that they had not agreed. The room was filled to suffocation by the crowd who sympathized with Anderson. They are quite orderly, but among those who thronged the corridors and staircases unable to get in, very angry threats were uttered, in which the dissenting Jurors and the counsel for defence were by no means spared. Of course this was all wrong, as every person connected with this trial has only done his duty. The counsel for defence, Messrs. BLANCHARD and ASHMEAD were appointed by the Court of General Sessions to defend the prisoner, and they have done so without expectation of remuneration.

Shortly after two o'clock the Jury sent the following communication to the Court:

"May it please your Honor—We, the Jury in the case of Cangemi, having given untiring attention thereto, and made the utmost effort to come to an unanimous verdict, find we are now divided precisely the same as we were at the commencement of our efforts, and that there is not the slightest probability of our being able to agree on a verdict. We therefore respectfully ask to be discharged."

Judge ROOSEVELT read the above aloud in Court and then said:

Considering the great importance, to say nothing of the expense of a second trial, I deem it my duty not to discharge the Jury until a further effort has been made to come to an agreement. The proceedings of the Court are published in the newspapers as the trial progresses, and everybody, more or less, reads them, and the result is, that the difficulty which attends the first trial, is greatly augmented in the second, so that the obtaining of a Jury in a second trial, in a case such as this, is almost impracticable. I think, therefore, I shall consult the interests of the public, and the duty I owe to all parties, to keep this Jury out still longer, and let them make some further effort to come to an agreement, especially as the counsel for the people withholds his consent to discharge them. He is acting under his oath of office, and I am bound to regard that objection as one that ought to have its weight. The Court, therefore, does not allow the Jury to be discharged at present.

The Judge then left the Court-room, having given instructions that he should be sent for, if the Jury agreed before 9 o'clock.

LATER.

At 9¼ o'clock last night the Jury had not changed their opinions, and were preparing for another night's sleep on the benches and floor of the Court Room. Outside the Court building, the crowd was small, compared with that of the previous night, and principally consisted of Italians, who were strong and unanimous in their persistence of the prisoner's innocence. It is now very certain that the Jury will not agree, and they will probably be discharged at the opening of the Court, at 10 o'clock this morning.

$23,000 of Property Destroyed.

A few minutes after 5 o'clock P. M., yesterday, the steam boiler of the Knickerbocker Plaster Works, in J. B. Kane, Nos. 506 and 510 West-street, suddenly exploded, demolishing the engine and boiler-house adjacent, and crushing in the walls of the premises, and severely injuring many persons. The explosion was heard for several miles, and the citizens unfamiliar previous due to explosion in the neighborhood. It was speedily known that an explosion occurred, and an immense rush of people made for the scene of the disaster. At first it was believed that a large number of persons had been killed, and the calamity was thought to be equal to the famed terrible Hoboken explosion. At the factory and building adjacent the wildest confusion and consternation prevailed, the sight exceeding the explosion. It was some hours before the full extent of the calamity was known, and there was general surprise, on the gratification, to ascertain that it did not prove more serious in its results.

The factory building had a front of 40 feet on West-street, with 64 feet depth, and was three stories in height. The boiler was in the cellar, about three feet from the building on the north side, so that the explosion threw some eight or ten feet from the building. The force of the explosion carried the entire structure to the ground. The dwelling adjacent, Nos. 511 and 513 West-street, was also completely thrown down. In the last two houses there were some 15 persons. In view of the fact that so many were in the three buildings, it is a matter of no more lives were lost. The police of the Fourth Ward and firemen who were present, did all in their power in rescuing those buried beneath the ruins. The following are the names of the killed and injured:

KILLED.

CATHARINE DUGANNE—she was in house No. 511 West-street.

INJURED IN THE FACTORY.

WM. ANDERSON, Engineer, badly bruised and scalded. Was taken from the ruins and removed to his residence in Jane-street.

ELIJAH JOHNSON, Foreman, slightly injured.

HENRY BURNHAM, injured internally; fear considerably bruised.

Several others were slightly bruised.

INJURED IN NO. 511 WEST-STREET.

The family of JOHN FARRELL, consisting of his wife and wife's sister, slightly injured.

WILLIAM McDONALD, wife and four children, all slightly injured.

Mrs. DUGANNE, (mother of CATHARINE, who was killed,) injured in right hip, and taken to the Hospital.

BRYAN CARPENTER and wife, slightly injured.

REFUGEE IN NO. 513.

EDWARD ELLIOTT, (occupied house as grocery store and residence,) injured internally and sent to Hospital.

BENJAMIN TAGGART, (clerk in the grocery,) right shoulder and face badly injured—removed to the Hospital.

CHARLES GREENE, (standing in door of grocery,) considerably bruised and scalded.

HUGH GILMORE, (standing with Greene,) scalded.

CHRISTIAN BROWN and wife, considerably injured.

BAKER ANDERSON, left leg fractured; taken to the Hospital. Wife and two children slightly injured.

MICHAEL CAREY, wife and three children, slightly injured.

LEWIS FOSTER and wife, slightly injured.

Mrs. BROWN, slightly injured.

JOHN BRADY, wife and two children, slightly injured.

The buildings, factories, and two dwellings were owned by Mr. KANE. The factory building was estimated at worth $8,000, and the stock and machinery at $10,000. The dwellings were valued at $5,000, making a total loss of property of $23,000.

He is insured on stock and machinery to the extent of $9,000. On No. 511 insured the Atlantic, New-York Equitable and Howard Insurance Companies. On No. 513 insured $1,500 in the Commercial Insurance Co.

Mr. ELLIOTT, the grocer, lost about $600, on which he had no insurance.

The boiler was built two years ago by J. A. Bonnell & Co. No cause is given for the explosion.

At a late hour the ruins had been so far removed that it was known that there were no other persons beneath.

A building owned by Mr. [illegible], on the rear of McKenney and Poplar streets, was also damaged.

Besides the above there were two other houses on Doughty-street destroyed, one belonging to Mr. LEVERSON and occupied by Alderman CASHOW, and the other to Mr. VAN SICKLEN, occupied by four families.

Most of the houses were occupied by a number of families, and among them the following, who lost more or less of their furniture: Mrs. [illegible], Mr. Heidenbrand, editor of the German paper, Alderman Cashow, Isaac White, Christopher [illegible], George Walter, cabinet-maker; Robert [illegible], printer; Daniel Nelson, bootmaker; Daniel Gallagher and John Carr.

The total loss is about $12,000.

SHOT TOWER BURNED.—At 9 o'clock last evening the shot tower in Fifty-third-street, near East River, was destroyed by fire.

VIRGINIA SPRINGS.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

WHITE SULPHUR, Friday, Sept. 11, 1857.

The fag-end of the season: all the roads of [illegible] away from the White Sulphur. Ex[illegible] are too, and a weary, starved [illegible] of wayfarers, is that which [illegible] Homeward drowsily at this fag-end [illegible] For the Virginia Springs, with one [illegible] characteristic of Northern watering-[illegible] There is the formula of shelter, the simulacrum of wellness, the counterfeit of good waiting, the pretence of cheerful rides, about them all; but at them all is the sober certainty of deprivation, dullness, and famine, which lends the [illegible] of homelit joys the keenest poignancy, and adds wings to the departing. These intellectual attributes vary in degree with the various localities; the only constant quantity is the water, invariably nauseous, unearthly Tartarean, sulphurous, everywhere; comparable only as a cure [illegible] Glauber salts, brimstone, of each equal parts. In the presence of such qualities the white sulphur is [illegible] The accommodations, where [illegible] and required, after a journey, more than [illegible] of the same primitive de[illegible] Tennessee village. The [illegible] is marshy, and [illegible] with the waters of Acheron [illegible] of deadly hate; or billeted upon sense [illegible] of the multitudinous huts which adorn the [illegible], and there left to the tender mercies of [illegible] to starve or otherwise perish at the [illegible] pleasure of that much-enduring race, [illegible] where practicable, is bacon and corn[illegible], and Sunday, to which all other viands [illegible] familiar to the cook, serve only as occasional and accidental garniture. A mind properly disciplined, however, to such dispensations may make head against even worse things; and if genial society be afforded, lose in this gratification [illegible] the sense of physical wrong. But there is no such compensation here. The visitors to the White Sulphur come hither in the mingled spirit of pilgrims and martyrs. They are, I need not tell you, nine-tenths Southerners, chiefly from the Carolinas, Tennessee and Virginia; a gaunt, sallow, listless people, difficult of amusement, content with conditions of life such as domestic charity withholds from slaves upon the plantation where they vegetate the rest of the year. To perform the minimum penance of a visit to White Sulphur appears to be held a duty of political as well as religious efficacy. It is a negative discouragement of the liberal sentiment supposed to poison the draught of Saratoga and Sharon, and renders the waves of Cape May and Newport less remedial than the waters of Old Point and Pascagoula. Also, the [illegible] at the Springs is representative of a wider and more respectable body of Southern opinion and feeling than can be collected elsewhere. Scarcely a district or interest is without its delegate. Rice, cotton and sugar—tobacco, bacon and [illegible]—meet and exchange views, as at a [illegible] mutually beneficiously beneficial. The solemn [illegible] gives character to [illegible] Society we have [illegible] There is little of the [illegible] of the Northern resort. The women [illegible] the gravity of the men. If the latter, viewed in connection with all the [illegible] resembled one of a Tartar camp, the former suggest a convent, where the devoutest and quietest graces of the sisterhood have repressed the ordinary tendency to enjoy religious uproariously. From this peculiar society one shrinks involuntarily. None of the usual resources—balls, socials, gambling, gossip—appear to relive it. It is impracticable, insoluble, [illegible] totally different from the flattering pictures of the Southern watering-places, with which the Northern public is frequently indulged, as a Quaker yearly meeting from a Metropolitan top. The "people we have met" at the White Sulphur, while not positively disagreeable, nor wholly lacking in the possibilities of refined social intercourse, are certainly the most thoroughly uncommunicable of any Summer company into which the experiences of many years have thrown me; and when the frost of self-assertion and pride has given away, I cannot say the conversational resources of the Southern gentleman repay the trouble it costs one to develop them. Of the gentlemen planters, I speak mainly. The crumbs of learning, the "little Latin and less Greek," with which a few years in early life at school and college distended him, have long ago escaped neglected. The lazy routine of plantation life, seldom vitalized by any intellectual pursuit, has really purely choked the word. His reading has been the county newspaper, reflecting the tones of some [illegible] with politicians at the State or Federal Capital, the Abolitionist-etc. being usually [illegible]; and if in wider scope to his literature has been indulged, possibly he has glanced at the prints and retained the Joe Millerisms of the last number of Harper—weekly or monthly—as peculiarly adapted to Southern requirements. Under these limited influences the planter is enabled to excel out his common-places touching his contracted range of interests; but the moment he gets beyond he is the embodiment of presumptuous ignorance and vigorous prejudice.

Such are, generically, the multitude, which no man can number, of Generals, Colonels, Governors and Esquires, who to-day are rolling away in their carriages from the Summer campaign. Such, in most instances, are the Doctors, who in point of numbers rank perhaps next to the purely military and civil prestige. But such usually are not the gentlemen learned in the law, who, with better opportunities and well-practiced elocution, monopolize the honors of conversation, now and then [illegible] the thought that Webster and Legaré are possibly niched higher in professional regard, and [illegible] a module of legal united with thorough literary and social culture, than it has been our wont to imagine. Could I mention the name of one with whose some of the most delightful hours I have ever spent were enjoyed this Summer, you would recognize a member of the Virginia bar, not unworthy of a place only second to those [illegible] products of Southern society.

But the Springs. While I digress, the exodus is drawing to a close. The last week of the season is more interesting than the first. The visitors go the way they came, and in the same equipages. And those equipages? They are less carriages than caravans. The old family coach has the whole family to carry, with a "tail" of colored followers that would have heightened the crest of Gamgarry. The baggage, including no small proportion of the conveniences requisite to camp life, and all the store of heir-looms in the way of [illegible] silks, embroidery, jewelry and [illegible], which every returning Summer has replenished at the Springs, almost hides the vehicle. One of these stately coaches crawls at this moment beneath my window westward ho; for Col. B. the patriarch is from M——County, Tennessee, and his path homeward is over the mountains and far away. The carriage is not without resemblance to a French diligence so huge, lumbering and unusual its proportions and motion the likely rush on the near wheel-horse four horses in the complement—affording a shadowy glimpse of the "postillion," and the mound of trunks behind and a top—aboriginal hair-trunks, subsequent, but forgotten portmanteaus, and mediæval sole-leather—rising up like the burden of that exotic conveyance. The two beturbaned mulatto girls perched on the driver's seat are the respective attendants of the Colonel's making elder sisters, and of the Colonel's lovely daughter, the mistress of whose commanding charms as a beauty and an heiress is fairly disputable. Col. B. sits in erect grandeur, not without pomposity, like the Scottish noble of romance in attitude, and the returned sabob of the comedy in look, he lean, bilious and sharpened is his face. Behind, on a smart gelding, is the boy BEN, leading the Colonel's saddle-horse, and that of his young mistress. The cavalcade is really impressing, not to say picturesque, a refreshing departure from the monotony of common-place Saratoga, where the family coach is the matter-of-fact railroad car, and the train is swung along by a locomotive. There is aristocracy in the old carriage and four; there is poetry in the stage coach, and something now and then akin to dancing in both of them, over a Virginia turnpike, where the calculus of MCADAM is of the integral sort—rocks in all their pre-Adamite hugeness and jaggedness; but the railroad is a sorry levelier, without poetry or peerage. One might unkent to all the isle of White Sulphur, if for no better reason than that it cannot be approached by steam; and that all the ambulances one sees hereabouts are consistently rustic and venerably antiquated. Yonder glosey baroucha, upon which the negroes are buttoning mud-excluding canvas, preliminary to a long journey, is even disagreeably modern; Governor D., the owner, living too near a great city not to be infected with the spirit of fashionable competition.

This, unhappily, is the last season when the White Sulphur is to be signalized by these pleasant features. Another year, and the incantation of change will penetrate hither through the Blue Ridge Tunnel. There will be more comfort at the cost of much state and much pretension. The good things of the place are in the postu-post future. When the world comes next year, it will come all the way by rail. The steam-engine is engaged to appear here early next Spring, and by Summer the vast plans of improvement contemplated by the new proprietors will be in flourishing operation. I assisted the other day at the striking spectacle of laying the corner-stone of a hotel, large enough to supply a bed each to everybody. If I give you the dimensions and material, your imagination will supply the rest. All hotels at watering places consist of a house behind vast white columns reaching from the ground to the roof—a house vast, shapeless, and indefinite in its hinder developments, and without conformity to any known order of architecture. This at the White Sulphur is to be of brick—the clay to build it is baking yonder; the height to be three stories, the square of ground it is to occupy 400 feet upon the side: and that most essential accommodation—the kitchen excepted—the dining room, will reach the entire depth of the building. The grounds and out-houses, or cottages, are to share in the general improvement. The negro hovels will, I presume, remain about the same. There will be fewer negroes at the Springs when visitors cease to come in their own old grand way. The bill of fare is to correspond with the other appointments of the new order of things. The cars will bring all manner of eatables from the market gardens which the Yankees have planted along the James river; the farmers and stock growers of the valley will, when duly encouraged, bring in their truck and live stock; and the hunters supply the multiform results of the chase, for which no corner of the country is more justly famous than Western Virginia. Such is the engagement of the new proprietorship, which, if verified, will amount to a radical revolution, and bring a fresh set of people to crowd out the primitives and laugh away the rustics. If not verified, let the strangers come not to the White Sulphur; for discomfort and poverty and hunger will be there before him.

The Story of the Welsh Mormon Contradicted by a Mormon.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Sept. 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Confiding in your regard for truth, I take the liberty of contradicting the report published in your paper of Monday, from the pen of JOHN DAVIES, against the inhabitants of Utah.

JOHN DAVIES left Great Salt Lake City on the 17th of April, on foot, with two or three persons as he affirmed, but they were not alone, escaping from the Mormons; they were with a team company coming to the States. The representation in that letter of being pursued from the city, his being armed with six revolvers in his belt, and two in his boots, his rifle and the heroic stand-up fight with his pursuers, and afterwards with Indians, is purely fiction. I left Great Salt Lake City only a few days after his departure with the Express, and was close on the track of this young man and fire-company all the way till we joined in with them a little this side of Laramie, and do know that he had no trouble with either Mormons or Indians, and so far from his being overloaded with weapons of war, he had scarcely a shirt to his back, and arms he had none. He is a poor Welsh lad about 18 years of age, who went to Utah with his parents, and returned to Iowa suddenly from that letter, because he could get along better there than in Utah. Dollars are little more plentiful in the States than in our poor Territory; he found that out and followed after what suited him best.

I see by inform you, Sir, that JOHN DAVIES saw no murder in Utah. He very probably told the writer of that letter what he had heard on the plains about Utah, as he came with an apostate train, where such reports are generally sweet morsels. The letter is written by some one anxious to dig into the Mormons, but his pen reveals too faithfully the nervous brain and poisoned heart to do any harm to the people of Utah. Shooting down on the streets by dozens is too great a stretch; still, it harmonizes with a poor boy's belt dangling with six revolvers, and the two hidden in his boots—and a rifle, too.

After we joined the party, as already stated, JOHN DAVIES was under my command, as I had, with A. P. WINZER, charge of that company into the States, and I knew him well. The Crow Indians stopped the company in which I was, before we overtook the others, so they did not see them at all, and knew nothing of our stoppage till we related it to them. In justice to the Crow Indians, referred to, I should say that not a shot was fired. They detained us, bothering about trafficking with them; other wise they were kind enough in their intercourse. Your obliged servant,

LYMAN S. WOOD,
Late Government Indian Interpreter in Utah.

Crime in Vermont.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

RUTLAND, Monday, Sept. 28, 1857.

We see through your columns that crime is in every part of the land except in Vermont, and as the editors of our papers fail to notice crime when it does exist, the public might think that Vermont is a virgin State, unpolluted by the stain of crime whatever. Such is not the case. It does exist to some extent in Vermont, and is too often hushed up and only known to the town and but seldom out of the county.

With the last two weeks in this town an employe of the Rutland and Washington Railroad had previously seduced a young girl, who, within a few days was apprised of her situation, and was counselled by her seducer to produce abortion which, it is stated, was done by a physician of previous good standing in our community. Both were duly arrested and lodged in Rutland Jail to await trial or to be recognized in the sums of $1,000 for the seducer and $500 for the doctor. The latter obtained bail, but the former is still in custody.

Last Saturday evening, at about 7½ o'clock, the gun-shop of ELIAS HALL, Esq., on West-street, was burglariously entered by two or three men during Mr. HALL's absence, but before they had accomplished their designs Mr. HALL returned, and while in the act of producing a light he was assailed by one of the burglars with a bar of iron, it is thought, receiving a number of blows across the head, cutting deep wounds. His cries of "murder" brought assistance, and the burglars escaped through a window. A physician was called, and his wounds dressed, and it is thought he will recover.

One of the burglars mistook Mr. HALL's hat for his own, and was at once traced to his residence and found playing "possum" in his bed, with part of his clothes on, and Mr. HALL's hat near by. He was accordingly given lodgings in the stone building to await trial. The others have not yet been taken.

Letter from Gen. Wm. Walker.

Letter from Gen. W. J. Jenkins in Reply to Gen. Walker.

MR. EDITOR: Returning from one of the Courts of our Circuit, at a late hour yesterday evening, your daily, of that date, was placed in my hand, and I was equally surprised and displeased to find in it a letter from Gen. WM. WALKER, addressed to me and taken by you from the New-Orleans True Delta. Although adverse, at all times, to newspaper notoriety, I cannot permit this publication to pass unnoticed.

When Gen. WALKER was last in Augusta, I paid him, as a man of mark, and a stranger, a visit of courtesy. I had never seen or corresponded with him before. Our conversation was general, having very slight reference to Nicaragua or Central America, until a gentleman present (who had been conversing apart with another) inquired whether he (General WALKER) had spoken to me in relation to the combination about which they had conversed. The General replied that he had not, but would like to do so, and, if I had no objection, would address me a letter on the subject, when more at leisure. This proposed letter, following a conversation on the subject, I, of course, understood was intended for publication. He then proceeded to detail the evidences of a combined effort, on the part of the Central American States, and the complicity of Great Britain in the scheme, to exclude Slavery from those States—as he has done in the letter published by you on the 15th inst. When he had gone through with this detail, I inquired, "What action do you propose, General, in the premises?" He replied, "I propose the specific action, but I think the people of the States are not fully informed of these occurrences, and should be fully apprised of them." At this time several gentlemen called, and the conversation was suspended. Upon their withdrawal, I remarked to Gen. WALKER "that circumstances did not permit a continuation of the conversation, which had been interrupted, (his time being limited and his engagements pressing, and my own calling me away then,) that if he chose to address me on the subject referred to, I would take pleasure in reading his communication, and would place it in the hands of a publisher if desired, but, I deemed it proper to say now, that its publication, as a letter addressed to me, must depend upon my concurrence in his views." He said, "You will not be at all committed by anything I may write"—to which I rejoined, "If it appear, as a letter addressed to me, and published by me, without comment, the natural inference will be that I entertain the views expressed." And here the conversation terminated. I do not profess to give the precise words used by us, but the above is, in substance, a correct report of what transpired. I heard nothing from Gen. WALKER until Saturday, the 12th inst., when, at a late hour, I received from the post-office, in manuscript, the letter which you copied from the Delta of the 9th.

On reading the letter attentively, I perceived it was not such a communication as I had reason to expect. The following conclusions, (to which nothing in our conversation pointed,) seemed to me very clear, viz.: that the first and last sentences were calculated to make the impression that we had conferred freely upon the merits of this Central American enterprise, and were agreed—(the correct ideas concerning matters in Central America, which he hoped I would endeavor to spread, will, of course, be understood to mean his ideas; and his hope of effort on my part to spread them, will be understood to rest upon my avowed concurrence with them.) That the most effective prevention of the evils foreshadowed is the project of Americanizing—in other words of conquering Central America; lastly, that as ancillary to the introduction of Slavery into the country—the African Slave-trade should be revived. I at once resolved that my name should not go to the public in connection with that letter; and a little more reflection brought me to the conclusion that I ought not to be, in any way, instrumental in giving it publicity. Being obliged to leave home at a very early hour on Monday morning, to be absent, as I then thought, for one, perhaps two weeks, I determined to take the letter with me and return it, with a courteous statement of my reasons for so doing, from the place to which I was going. Returning, however, very unexpectedly the day following, this was not done. Judge of my surprise, then, on finding, [illegible] that the letter in question had fallen [illegible] of its publication, [illegible] determining whether or not my name should appear, in print, in connection with that letter.

He has driven me to the alternative of submitting to inevitable misconstruction, or of making unfavorable comments upon a letter addressed to myself. I chose the latter, declaring unequivocally—First, that I wholly disapprove Gen. WM. WALKER's contemplated invasion and conquest of Nicaragua. Secondly, that the proposed revival of the African slave-trade is abhorrent to me. I will add that Gen. WALKER has taken a very unwarrantable liberty with me—a liberty inconsistent with the sense of propriety which should regulate intercourse between strangers—a liberty expressly interdicted by my plain declaration, that "its publication as a letter addressed to me, must depend upon my concurrence in his views."

Very respectfully, &c. CHARLES J. JENKINS.

P. S.—Papers that may have published General WALKER's letter to me, are requested to publish this also.

Pecuniary Condition of Douglass Jerrold's Family.

From Lloyd's Newspaper, Sept. 12.

I feel it due to the memory of my father, that the readers of this journal, at any rate, should not misunderstand the position in which he left his family. Fifty rumors, one and all erroneous, have been circulated on this private subject—become a public one by the false light such rumors have cast upon my father's character. My father left property sworn at Doctors' Commons at £1,500. In addition to this sum my mother held a policy in her own right, on my father's life, value £1,000; other items raise the total sum to £3,000. The copyrights of my father's plays realize an average income of £100. More, the position of the members of my father's family would have enabled them, had there been need for their exertions, to supply any deficiency the above property could not cover. It is due to the memory of my father that the public should know that he left a sufficiency for my mother and sister; and that the love of his own kindred, in any case, would have insured this sufficiency.

In explanation of the "Remembrance" performances, I, as representative of my father's family, should state that I declined emphatically to receive anything that should wear the appearance of a charity—such charity being needless. The "Remembrance" performances, I was distinctly assured, would be in honor of my father's memory, and be offered as an addition to his estate. If the public have gathered any idea from the conduct of these performances, that they were efforts of charity, I have only to assure them, on the part of Mr. DOUGLASS JERROLD'S family, that the illustrious dead had husbanded sufficiently against the need thereof, even after the loss of thousands, for which, in the chivalry of friendship, he became security.

I thank the earnest friends who have conducted these performances, for their real and kind intentions, but I decline to permit the English public to remain impressed with the idea that there was need to pass the hat round—however gracefully—in the name of DOUGLASS JERROLD, a name that shall not want my exertion, at least, to preserve its independence.

BLANCHARD JERROLD.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—A deeply distressing accident took place on Saturday afternoon, at about ¾ o'clock, just South of Benning's bridge, whereby a most worthy and promising young man, Mr. EUGENE BUSH, second son of Mr. DAVID H. BUSH, of this city, late Surveyor-General of Utah, lost his life. He was returning from shooting in company with two young friends, HENRY ROBBINS and WILLIAM MCLEAN, and was in the act of taking his gun from the skiff he had brought ashore from the East side of the Anacostia, when the gun exploded, and lodged the contents of one of its barrels (a full load of duck-shot) in his right side. It appears that he took the gun up with the muzzle pointing directly to him, and that the cap exploded by the hammer striking upon one of the seats of the skiff. As soon as shot the unfortunate youth placed his hand upon the wound, staggered back a pace or two, and fell, exclaiming, "Oh, how foolish I was, after all the warnings I have had!" His companions stuffed a handkerchief into the wound to keep down the gushing blood, and at length got their friend nearer the bridge, where he was placed on a plank until assistance, medical and otherwise, could be obtained from the city. It was nearly 9 o'clock before Mr. BUSH was brought home. Drs. LIPPITT, MAY, RICHARDS and MIDDLETON were in attendance more or less all Saturday night, but the case was beyond remedy, and the ill-fated young man died about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. He continued in full possession of his senses to the moment of his death, a few minutes before which he had strength enough to comb down his own hair. He would have been 18 years of age in January next. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. BUSH, have been spending some time on States Island, but were yesterday telegraphed of the dreadful event.—National Intelligencer.

Fire in the Onondaga Bank.

THE BURNT TOWER UP AND BURNING—ARREST OF ENTRY CLERK.

From the Syracuse Journal of Monday, evening.

About 8½ o'clock on Sunday morning, fire was discovered in the counting-room of the Onondaga Bank, and an entrance was promptly effected by the firemen, who soon succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The fire apparently caught under the counter of the Bank, and burned a portion of the desk, besides blacking and scorching all the wood work in the room. The building was damaged by fire and water to the extent of about $200—fully insured. The loss to the Bank is not serious, as the fire did not reach any of the funds, and the assets of the Bank are all safe. The books of the Bank had been purposely left out of the safe on Saturday evening, under the following circumstances, as related by GEORGE GARDNER, Esq., the Cashier:

A week or two since an error was discovered in the entries of one of the clerks, CHARLES H. HASBROUCK. A check for $60 was charged to Messrs. MERRIAM & MCCARTHY, for which there was no voucher. The cashier noticed the error in his cash account, and with one or more of the directors, had been watching the proceedings of the entry clerk. On Saturday afternoon last the error was again pointed out to Mr. HASBROUCK, and he was called to explain it, but was unable to do so. Some little time was occupied in the examination with the clerk, and in unavailing efforts to find the lost check, and the books were left out of the safe for the purpose of enabling him to finish up his business, and if possible explain the error in the accounts.

It seems that on the same evening Mr. HASBROUCK called on Mr. WM. BOSTON, and asked Mr. B. to exchange a check for $235 50 for two checks, one of $30, and the other of $205 50, for the purpose of correcting a mistake made in the entries of the bank books. Mr. BOSTON readily consented to the exchange, and Mr. HASBROUCK then took the two checks to Mr. GARDNER, at his house, and presented them to him as an explanation of the wrong charge in the books. Mr. GARDNER expressed himself dissatisfied with the explanation, but the matter was laid over till Monday morning, the books in the meantime being left in the care of the clerk.

These circumstances, followed up by the fire, induced the Directors to ask for an investigation; at the close of which Mr. GARDNER went before Justice THOMPSON and made affidavit that he had good and sufficient reason for believing that C. H. HASBROUCK set fire to the building, and asked for a warrant for his arrest. A warrant was granted and placed in the hands of Chief of Police DAVIS, who took the young man into custody. We understand he is to have his examination to-morrow.

The Boards of Directors passed a resolution not to pay any checks of depositors, on account of the damaged state of their books—they being so badly burned that they cannot tell how the accounts of depositors stand. They are paying bill holder in specie, if demanded. The Bank is sound, and the public may have no fears in taking their notes. They will doubtless be in successful operation in a few days. We learn that depositors are making their deposits as usual to-day.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The ship Golden Star, Captain Victor Constant, arrived at Boston on Saturday, from Nassau, N. P. The ship had been abandoned, and Captain Constant was sent out to look after her. He found her in a wretched condition, with her deck level with the water. He sent to the United States for a steam pump, and in the meantime met with every opposition from the inhabitants of that island, who refused to assist him. But Captain Constant persevered, and has brought the ship safely into port, saving a large amount of property to his employers.

A singular case is said to have occurred recently in Syracuse. A captain of a canal-boat named Haven became the father of a child by his washwoman, an Irishwoman, named Grier. This woman was married to a man undergoing sentence of imprisonment in the State Prison for the term of five years. His wife had no access to him. Mrs. Grier sued Haven for the child's maintenance. Justice Parsons decided that the child was to be deemed Grier's child, and dismissed the case.

Joseph Baker, 17 years old, had a difficulty in Cincinnati last week with his parents, left the house and came home intoxicated. His mother chided him, and he, partly from anger and partly from remorse, went into an outhouse and endeavored to hang himself with his suspenders. He would no doubt have succeeded in his attempt had not some one entered the tenement, and interfered with his purpose.

The Fredonia Advertiser has an account of a murder at Wright's Corners in Villenova, on the 13th. An altercation took place between Allen and Silas Phillips, sons of Richard Phillips. The father attempted to interfere, Allen struck his father three or four blows the last just below the back of his ear, and broke his neck; he was [illegible] instantly killed.

There are embraced in the report 197 private schools, having 3,774 pupils; 74 academies, with 2,995 pupils; 20 colleges, with 1,000 students.

The Annual Fair of the Orange County Agricultural Society, was held on the 23d and 24th September in Goshen. The exhibition, although not so large as might have been expected in a county like Orange, was tolerably fair—but was very deficient in butter, the staple of the county.

The Secretary of the Interior has received a letter from the United States Marshal of Minnesota Territory, in which he states that he is busily engaged in making arrangements for taking the census. The work will be one requiring much time and labor, as many of the counties are of great extent, and very sparsely settled.

The Philadelphia Ledger says that in that city, twenty-five years ago, there were not over forty men engaged in the chiseling of marble or stone of any kind; now there are 700 to 800 men employed. Marble is imported from Carrara in Italy, at an equal distance from Genoa and Leghorn, from which ports the vessels are cleared.

The Postmaster-General has returned to foreign countries the following dead letters, under existing treaty stipulations: To the General Post-Office of England, 19,849; to Canada, 8,450; to Bremen, 2,970; to Prussia, 6,161; France, 500; New-Brunswick, 534, and to Nova Scotia, 516—Total, 38,980.

At a fire in Pausland, Me., last week, Mr. Andrew Newman, a fireman, performed a valorous feat by rushing into the flames to rescue a child which had been left in a room in the third story of the burning building. The child was badly burned, but has recovered.

Joseph Downie, a colored man, living a mile above Birmingham, N. J., has been imprisoned in Trenton, to await his trial for shooting his wife on Wednesday night—the injuries received resulting in her death. Downie has another wife living.

On Saturday, in Philadelphia, a woman named Eliza Banks, residing in the vicinity of the House of Refuge, attempted to commit suicide by suspending herself by the neck to a bed post. She was discovered and cut down.

A new movement has been started at Philadelphia, intended to benefit the laboring classes, by giving instructions and employment to a class of young girls, who have been left to choose for themselves, in many instances, their mode of earning a livelihood.

The Secretary of the Interior has concluded an arrangement by which the Government has purchased, for the sum of $105,000, contingent upon the approval of Congress, the Boston Masonic Temple for the use of the United States Courts.

A KEG FOUND CONTAINING SIXTEEN HUNDRED FRENCH COINS!—An extraordinary story reaches us which we give as we received it. The report is that two men named WARD and HALL, were at work down the lake shore, some miles from this city, getting out hoop-stuff, when they discovered a small keg buried in the sand. This they dug out, and opening it, found it contained 1,600 silver pieces. The coins were of an ancient French cast and of the denomination of seven franc pieces, valued at $1 09 each. The two men with their treasure have left for Philadelphia, where they intend to exchange their coin at the mint. It is probable that the money was secreted in the place where it was discovered, by some French officer during the old French war, and afterwards the officer may have been killed, leaving no trace where the treasure was concealed. Thus it has fallen, at last, into the hands of a couple of Yankees.—Oswego Daily Times of Monday.

CIRCULAR TO LAND OFFICERS.—The following circular has been issued by the Commissioners of the General Land Office:

1. In cases where the approved plat of survey has not yet been returned, the declaratory statement must be entitled within three months after the receipt of such approved plat of the district office.

2. Where the plat is now in the Register's office, the declaration must be filed within three months from the first publication of this circular in your local district.

A failure to comply with this requirement will work a forfeiture of the claim.

TO WHAT BASE USE!—"Shade of WASHINGTON!" was our involuntary ejaculation as we saw yesterday, a measly female Hibernian seating herself around the old red sandstone statue of the Father of his Country, in the Park. Watching her operations, we saw that she was getting her "auld man" a comfortable and retired place to eat his dinner from a tin-pail which he had "conveyed." We at first thought the Essential pair were going round the blind side of the statue, to see if they could get any light on the mooted question whether the revered revolutionary captain did really say, "Put none but Americans on guard to-night."—Day Book.

WHO WAS MR. HARDELL.

Sworn Statement from the Spirit Himself of his Life in the Flesh.

From the Boston Post.

The following remarkable communications regarding the murder of Doctor HARVEY BURDELL, have been published in the New Letter through a spiritual source. The interviews took place at three several times, at intervals of six weeks, to test his recollections of facts. It will be seen that the narrative is in the form of an affidavit, and we commend the whole to the attention of those who are busying about it. Let the lovers of the marvelous read:

I, HARVEY BURDELL, of the City of New-York, deceased, after being carefully examined, narrate the whole statement at three several times, after being duly sworn, depose and say, that I resided at No. 31 Bond-street, New-York City; that I died on the 20th of January, 1857, at about half-past ten o'clock P. M., from the immediate effects of a blow struck in the back of my head, with a nail hammer, the mark of which is left on my skull, and six more wounds, and one scratch inflicted by two dirk knives, in the hands of two females, a mother and a daughter. I became acquainted with the mother some two years and eight months previous to my death; that shortly after I became acquainted with her, she placed in my hands certain moneys and securities, to an amount for safe keeping, to the amount of $6,000, (some thousand dollars,) and almost $600 in Bank Books; that at this time I shared her bed; she became pregnant, and an abortion was procured at three months, by a person whom I employed, which greatly injured her health; illicit intercourse with her two daughters then occurred; I did promise to marry her, and, feel out enthusiasm to that effect, until after I obtained possession of all her property, which I appropriated to my own use, and deposited in my own name; that I never attended any ceremony constituting marriage; I was never married to her; she is not my widow; that I gave this woman no receipt or any acknowledgment whatever for the above money, securities, &c.; that she has no means of proving that I received any portion, and that I absolutely refused to give her any more; that her previous to my murder, and for nine months before, I frequently threatened to turn her out of my house, No. 31 Bond-street, and really intended so to do; that frequent quarrels had taken place in that time between us, and her eldest daughter, whom I struck on one occasion, insulted and knocked her down; that on the day of my death I took some money from the bank, with the intention of purchasing gold dust from California and for paying other claims, to the amount of $3,000, perhaps a trifle less or more; that they were notes of hand due me for the sale of gold plate, &c., to the amount of $3,725, all in my safe; there was in my room where I died, a large red-leather trunk, iron-bound. It was a strong trunk, with brass rivets passing through from bands. It contained my wearing apparel and some pieces of gold and gold plate, and about $1,500 (fifteen hundred dollars) worth of gold-dust which I intended to remove. That a woman visited me in the fore part of the day on which I was killed, for the purpose of hiring my house, No. 31 Bond-street; and I agreed to give her a lease, duly executed, on the next day, when she left. About 8 o'clock the woman and daughter came into my room, greatly enraged, and related part of the conversation just had with the person who was about to hire the house, loud talking ensued, and she said that I would not live to sign that lease—that she would kill me before I signed that paper. At the time, from her manner, looks and expression, I believed that she intended to do so, which then impressed my mind with a dread and fixed sense of fear. It gave me anxiety, I thought she was about to be arrested for my conduct in defrauding her of her money. I left the house and saw a gentleman to whom I told my fears, and wished him to accompany me to my lodgings, that night. After returning to my office, and placing some papers in my safe I left and went to take tea. I remained reading till a little after 10 o'clock, and then left for my rooms at No. 31 Bond-street—no person with me at the time. The first person I recognized when I came out of my boarding-house was a "young man," who came up to me, stopped me, calling me by name, Dr. Burdell, and conversed, asking me if I was going home. I replied that I was. He was pleasant in his manner. As I stopped, he left me and walked rapidly away towards No. 31 Bond-street, and came past me again, going up Bond-street, as I was going to my room. A signal was given at this time to prepare for my approach, when the "young man" came after me to see that no person followed. A man at this time being in the entry gave notice to the woman and her daughter to take their position in my room, and with the weapons of death, viz.: two dirk knives and a large-sized nail hammer, bought for the purpose. The "young man" being on the outside to give a signal to the man in the entry, I came to the door of my house with my night-key, placed it [illegible] room door, which I usually left unlocked, [illegible] the room. I threw my shawl on the sofa, and while in the act of taking off my cloth cap I was surprised by a severe blow on the back of the head from a nail hammer; all was dark, when I cried out "Murder!" This staggered and stunned me at once. I was then seized by the throat, and at one and the same time, I was stabbed in the neck, cutting off a blood-vessel, and from behind in my back. The blood poured out profusely, and I fell forward on the floor dead! In less than ONE MINUTE AND ONE-QUARTER from the time I entered the house I was dead! My spirit, uninjured, conscious and calm, was fully and instantly released from my body; my spiritual mind was sensible and I can distinctly see, as of yesterday, my murdered body with a perfect sight! I also saw clearly the mother stabbing my dead body, and the dreadful promise and threat fulfilled by the very person who so often made it. I discerned her countenance distorted, her eyes glaring with fear. She was dressed with blood, her feet without shoes, with stockings insaturated with blood in which she trod. I also saw her daughter using the dirk-knife stabbing my body, with nothing on but her chemise and night-gown; she was also bloody, but not near so much as her mother; her feet were very steady in this transpiral. Another signal was given from the street, and the man in the entry opened the front door.

At this instant I saw the daughter distinctly heard her say "Oh, mother!" and looked with a terror-stricken look, as they both rushed out of the room. I seemed instantly to follow, without exertion, as they both fled; the mother rushed down to the front door, the man in the entry said, "He is gone," and the door was opened again, and the mother looked outward very much agitated; the "young man" appeared, asked "Is it done?" and the mother flew to the attic. I was at once there; also, determined to see and hear; the daughter rushed down to the two persons below, who had come up stairs and stood in the entry at my room door, where she said, "Mother says, he cannot be dead; tell her; tell her; come and see if he is dead." Only five minutes had transpired since I came to the room. Every motion, from the first blow, was rapid. The "young man" and the man in the entry at the outset, entered my room; the man I saw in the entry fire the gas, the "young man" stooped down and felt of my body; the man also looked, and instantly, and together took hold of my body and moved it. "He is dead." "Yes," in reply "he's dead!" then the daughter left, and I heard her scarcely say "he is dead, mother, it is all over." She was then washing in the attic. The daughter having washed came down very shortly, folded my shawl, laid my cap as it remained, my pockets were examined, the keys of my trunk &c., taken. The money also taken and my body removed by the two men together, to near the spot where it lay. The man in the entry untied my cravat and they afterwards finally adjusted and fixed my body as it was found. The removal of my trunk to the attic now took place by the two men. It was opened, my clothes were burnt, some pieces of gold plate examined, with about $1,500 worth of gold-dust and other valuables. I lost none of my consciousness, made no effort to hear their conversation, or to see distinctly what was done; no uneasiness pervaded my spirit. I was intent and discerning truly without apparent effort. All that passed me before was done by the four persons; three of them I think, went to the room; they again looked at my body. The "young man" with a key opened my safe and the other man handled the money—being $3,000—the papers were burnt, notes also were there to the amount of $3,725. My will and other papers were burnt. The trunk was then packed; at 10½ o'clock my room was adjusted; my body placed and arranged as it was found. The door was then closed. I saw the contents of the trunk, the instruments of death and other things put into it and locked; the woman marked it, to put in the cars, for Saratoga. In the morning a dray took it to a depot, as directed by the man in the entry. I was present when the boy came to my room to make the dray. Conscious and perfectly composed. I was present at the examination of my body, and heard and saw all that transpired, and wondered that they did not discover the mark of the hammer on my skull.

Signed, HARVEY BURDELL.

RUMORED DISCOVERY OF A LARGE AMOUNT OF FORGED PAPER IN BOSTON.—The monetary excitement in State-street was a little varied yesterday by rumors of the discovery of a large amount of forged paper, stated by some at $20,000, and by others as high as $40,000. As to the location and holders of this paper there was, however, a good deal of mystery, and as the presence of such other engrossing matters as the news from Philadelphia of mercantile failures, bank suspensions, &c., &c., did not excite that general attention that such an announcement generally receives from the mercantile and moneyed interests of the city. We presume, however, from information in our possession, that the forged paper in question is that which has been quite freely circulated in the city within a few months, bearing the supposed signature of JAMES PAUL & Co., small traders, of Biddeford or Saco, Me., and the indorsement of HALLETT, PRESCOTT, GURNEY & Co., a dry goods firm of Hanover-street, in this city, which failed a day or two since. How much there is of this paper, and what is its real character, we are as yet, not fully informed.—Boston Traveller, Saturday.

BOSTON MASONIC TEMPLE.—We understand that the Masons, who own the Masonic Temple, have finally concluded to sell to the United States Government, and that the price which they demand, a trifle over $100,000, has been forwarded to Washington for acceptance.—Boston Post.

week ago, and the influence of it felt, after a week's recovery in holding and trying another market, were told here to-day at $35 to $40 ⅌ head. The expense of bringing them here, in my nothing of the loss, was about $40 each. The owners lost up the loss at a trifle short of $5000 on the lot. Not a very profitable speculation, that.

Gilmore & Parsons had 51 fair Ohio Cattle, one of which had been sold for $110, or about 10c. The rest were anxiously waiting for their owners were for sale. Lovett & Gilmore were trying to sell Oxen. Mr. Gilmore called this the fullest market he had seen.

S. Lilly was one of the fortunate men, disposing of his lot of 74 fine Kentucky Cattle which he had purchased at Albany. They were estimated at 825 lbs. net, and brought 10¼c.

E. W. Guyer had 65 good steers, which weighed at Madison County, Ohio, 1,300 lbs. gross. Ackerman & Cowen were selling them at 10c.@11¼c. They were a nice lot, 10 of the top bringing $96 each, or near 11½c.

J. J. Carter contributed 80 fairish 600 lb steers of Ohio raising, which S. Sutton was running out at about $53 each, or a little less than 9c.

S. Berrall was selling a few Dutchess County Steers for different parties at near 10c. A few Oxen belonging to L. Sisson brought $90 each, which was a little short of 11c., on an estimate of 850 lbs. C. Guyer took one pair at $400, which was called a little over 11c.

Marshall & Taylor contributed 51 pretty fair Ohio Steers, rated at 870 lbs., which J. Brayton was selling at 10c.@10½c.

James S. Wadsworth, of Genesee, Livingston County, N. Y., started a drove of Steers and spayed Heifers from his place, but sold the steers at Albany at better prices than he could have obtained for them here. The heifers were of his own breeding, and very fine, weighing 1,322 lbs., gross, at home. They brought $67 50 each, or 11c. ⅌ lb. J. Brayton, seller.

J. C. Haag sold yesterday 20 of his own Dutchess County Cattle at 10c.@10½c. They were reported as fine cattle, and brought much better prices than had been obtained to-day, by near 1c. ⅌ lb.

J. S. Barnes sold 20 of Sorrell's Illinois cattle for Vaughan. They were likely still-fed steers. He was selling, or trying to sell, 10 of McPherson's cattle, at about 10c. These were good 900 ⅌. steers.

Fish and Pease had 102 scarcely medium steers from McLane County, Illinois. They were rated at 875 lbs., and were bringing Ackerman & Martin 10c.@11c.—very few at the latter price.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and very greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $60@$100, or even $125. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $35 to $45, or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20@$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The receipts have been small during the past week, but there is no scarcity as yet. Milkmen are buying only sparingly at the present time, assigning as one cause the uncertainty of a continuation of their chief feed, viz., distillery slops.

Allerton reports receipts of no fresh cows during the week. Some stale ones have been sold at former prices. There is very little demand for them at present.

Browning reports receipts of 30 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $35@$40 for good, and $50@$65 for extras. With free receipts there have been very few buyers, and the market is extremely dull. A large portion of the offerings remain on hand.

Chamberlin reports 30 Milch Cows, selling at $28@$35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $50@$65 for extras. No variation during the past week.

O'Brien reports 46 Milch Cows selling at $25@$30 for common, $40@$50 for good and $50@$60 for extras. A few superior Cows have brought $75@$100. The market continues dull, with plenty on hand.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are Allerton's, Browning's, Chamberlin's and O'Brien's.

The numbers offered at the different markets during the past week have been small, and prices are a little stronger. They would doubtless be more so, but for plenty of beef at reduced prices.

Allerton reports receipts of 360 Veal Calves, selling at 5¾c.@7c., with a very few at 7½c. Stocks of only medium quality, with plenty on hand, notwithstanding the receipts are much lighter than for the previous week.

Browning reports receipts of 54 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7½c. A few extras bring 8c. The supply just equals the demand. Sales are free at about last week's rates.

Chamberlin reports receipts of 125 Veal Calves selling at 6¼c.@8c., with large receipts. The market continues good.

O'Brien reports 72 Veal Calves, selling at 6¼c.@7½c. They are selling with tolerable briskness at former prices. Supply short.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at Allerton's, Browning's, and Chamberlin's, at so much ⅌ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reported prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ⅌ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

There was a decline on sheep of 50c. ⅌ head, and in some cases even more at most of the markets to-day. Prices generally of both Mutton and dead Sheep and a marked decline in pelts, both tend to depress the market. Some store sheep were selling in the present market for near $1 ⅌ head less than similar qualities were bringing last week. A full supply now on hand.

Allerton reports receipts of 1,920 Sheep and Lambs, selling, at 8c.@10c. ⅌ lb. dressed weight for Sheep, and 9c.@12c. ⅌ lb. for Lambs. Receipts have been large, and with the low prices of beef and a decline in pelts, there has been a falling off of about 50c. ⅌ head. There is a large supply on hand.

Browning reports sales of 1,620 Sheep and Lambs at $2 50@$6 for Sheep and $2 50@$3 50 for Lambs. Trade dull.

Browning reports receipts of 5,556 Sheep and Lambs, selling generally at 8c.@10c. net for Sheep, and 10c. for Lambs. The market was good during the latter part of last week. Friday being one of the best days of the season. Stock also sold very well on Monday, but is dull to-day, at a decline of fully 50c. ⅌ head. One lot of store Sheep, which brought $4 each last Wednesday, are selling for $3 to-day. A lot of 60 very good Lambs, which would dress about 40 lbs., sold at $4 75 each, or near 12c. ⅌ lb. Owing to a detention of the Hudson River boats, no stock came from Albany last night. There are only a few hundred on sale this morning.

Chamberlin reports receipts of 4,197 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $2 50@$6 ⅌ head, with no material variation in the market since last week although the receipts have been more free.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ⅌ lb. gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at Allerton's, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughtering houses.

The receipts during the past week have been fully equal to the demand, and the market is yielding. With plenty of corn at the West, it is likely a good supply of fat hogs will be prepared for the markets, although they may be late in fattening.

Allerton reports receipts of 2,600 hogs during the past week. Prices for live hogs ranged during the week at 5¾c.@6¼c. for prime corn-fed hogs, and 5¼c.@5½c. for distillery hogs. There is a good supply for the market, some 2,000 being now on hand. The market is not firm at the above quotations.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

[illegible] from New-Orleans states that [illegible] Walker, having arrived there, re[illegible] also wished to wait three days at [illegible] for the Star of the West, and "that [illegible]." In answer to this, we have to [illegible] any alarm about the Star of the West, as it is quite unnecessary. We are [illegible] that she did not intend to stop at [illegible]. Furthermore, the boat on the Pa[illegible] side being very slow, the Star of the West is not due at this port before to-day, and may not arrive until to-morrow, or even Saturday.

The Central steamship Arabia, from Liverpool on the 19th ult., is now due at this port. She will bring three days' later European intelligence. At 1 o'clock this morning there was no appearance of the Arabia off Sandy Hook.

We have received Buenos Ayres papers to the 16th of August—two weeks later than previous advices. No news of importance is reported. The House of Representatives had [illegible] the passport system, and confirmation by the Senate was daily expected. Seven new railroad enterprises were on the tapis. It is reported that the expedition which lately set out to explore the Salado has encountered great obstacles from the swollen state of that river. The little steamers could make but slight progress against the strong current, and it was found almost impossible to keep in the right channel. We hope, however, to hear by next arrival that these difficulties have been conquered, as the navigation of the Salado is one of the most important enterprises now on foot for the development of the resources of the South American Confederacy.

A correspondence has taken place between the Government and that of England, concerning the possessions of the Hudson's Bay Company south of the forty-ninth parallel of latitude, and within the territories of Washington and Oregon. By the treaty of 1846, the right of sovereignty over this territory was declared to be in the United States—the Hudson's Bay Company assert that their rights of property are the same as before. Servants of the Company have put in claims for portions of this land, under grants to settlers, from this Government. The question will be settled by negotiations with the Government.

The Mormons are breaking up their quarters in all the Eastern States, preparatory, as is [illegible], to a general migration to Utah. Recent news from that region represent them as [illegible] as ever, and disposed to resist the advent of National Troops among them. Elder Kimball recently preached a sermon at Salt Lake, in which he remarked that the overtures for the army would be allowed to enter the Valley, but that the troops would never enter Salt Lake City. Recent advices from Fort Kearney state that a heavy [illegible] of provisions had been made in a [illegible].

A letter appears in the Baltimore American, from an agent of the Colonization Office in that city, stating that advices have been received from Liberia to Aug. 16, in which no [illegible] whatever is made to famine, or even scarcity. It is therefore concluded that if any [illegible] it was merely temporary. The ill [illegible] of the report, however, have been felt [illegible] the country, in the detention of a [illegible] portion of emigrants who were to [illegible] this Fall.

The Jury, in the case of Cangemi, did not agree yesterday. They were accordingly locked up for the second night. Undoubtedly they will not agree. There are a score of reports current as to how they stand for conviction or acquittal, but none were sufficiently reliable for publication. The excitement in relation to this trial is greater, with the exception, of course, of that of Mrs. Cunningham for the murder of Dr. Burdell, than has occurred for many years past in this City.

The Democratic Young Men's General Committee (Small side) met in Tammany last evening, with John D. Maghesson in the chair. They passed a series of resolutions indorsing the Democratic State ticket, congratulating the brethren upon the restoration of harmony in the City ranks, and breathing strong hopes of success at the coming election. They also appointed a Committee to confer with the Young Men's Committee, of which Jonas B. Phillips is Chairman, in relation to a union.

The 74th Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of New-York, is now in session—Provisional Bishop Potter in the Chair. The session is held in St. John's Church, where the proceedings were opened yesterday by Divine service, and a sermon from Bishop Kipp, of California. The Convention is expected to last several days.

The marine losses for the month of September, (including the Central America, which is placed at $2,000,000,) foots up nearly $3,000,000. In this sum are comprised losses both total and partial, and damages on vessels and cargoes.

The examination in the case of Officers Kenny and McKay, of the Sixth Ward, charged with receiving money from prisoners, in violation of the rules and regulations of the Police Department, was concluded yesterday before the Board of Discipline of the Police Commissioners. The evidence had reference mainly to the good character of the accused officers, and their efficiency heretofore as members of the Police. Decision in both cases is reserved till Saturday.

At 5 o'clock last evening the boiler in the Knickerbocker Plaster Mills, Nos. 509 and 510 West-street, exploded, knocking down the mills and two buildings adjoining—killing a female, and injuring thirty-seven persons more or less seriously.

George E. Parmlee, wholesale dealer in straw goods, at No. 25 Murray-street, was arrested yesterday, charged with having stolen $30,000 worth of silks, satins, and other costly goods from Messrs. H. G. Dimblee & Co., doing business at the same place in Murray-street.

The steamer Knickerbocker sank at her wharf at Albany on Tuesday night. She was heavily loaded with merchandise.

The Councilmen tried hard, but in vain, yesterday, to get a quorum.

Central America.

The representatives of the several States of Central America have united in asking our Government to prevent the descent of another army of invaders from the United States upon their coast. They state that they have reason to believe that a fresh expedition will leave one of the Southern ports early in the present month and proceed to the Bocas del Toro, where it will take on board guns and other munitions of war forwarded from this City, and then proceed to some Nicaraguan port for purposes of hostility against that territory. The expedition is to be under the command of General Walker. It is urged that this Government owes it to the Governments of the threatened States to prevent this renewal of an unlawful and humane crusade, by arresting those engaged in it, if not previous to their departure, at all events before their landing. General Cass, in reply to this just and proper request, preaches the inalienable right of every citizen to expatriate himself, and thus to place himself beyond the reach of American law.

Our Washington correspondence this morning represents the Ministers of the threatened States as not being satisfied with this cautious and evasive truism. They urge in reply to it that no man is permitted to divest himself of allegiance to one country, until he shall have been duly recognized and accepted as a citizen or subject of another;—that Nicaragua does not receive as citizens men who come professedly as emigrants but really as enemies;—and that they are not, therefore, discharged from their obligations to the laws of the United States. If our correspondent gives a correct resumé of their argument as presented to the American Secretary, it is one which deserves his careful and attentive consideration. Gen. Cass has more than once declared, in very direct and unmistakable language, his full and cordial sympathy with the advance of Northern civilization upon the mixed races of Central America. But we prefer not to see in these declarations, made before he had assumed the responsibilities of this high post which he now fills, anything more than a very natural desire for the extension of free institutions and the energies which they create into regions which greatly need them both. We cannot suppose that Gen. Cass would allow these sympathies to make him, for a moment, indifferent to a very gross and flagrant violation of our own laws, and a still more dishonorable breach of our obligations to friendly and neighboring powers.

We hear it reported on every side that the Government has issued the most stringent orders to its subordinates, to prevent the departure from our ports of armed crusaders against countries with which we are at peace. We trust these may be sufficient. But they have signally failed hitherto, and may fail again. And the question then comes up, whether our Government is bound to forego all further attempts to prevent their hostile operations, as soon as they shall have succeeded in evading the vigilance of our officers on shore. If they continue to be citizens of the United States, they are still subject to our laws and may still be pursued and punished for violation of them. They cannot become citizens of any other country without some assenting action on the part of its Government. Nor can they divest themselves of American citizenship without becoming subject to some other Government, for in that case they would be outlaws,—hostes humani generis—and liable to arrest by whatever power they might encounter.

We trust our Government will consider in a candid and friendly spirit the remonstrances of these Central American States, and take some effectual measures to prevent a renewal of proceedings from which so much individual suffering, as well as loss of national character, has already resulted.

The Arabia, now fully due in this port from Liverpool, will bring us the details of the Indian intelligence which was yesterday telegraphed to this City from St. John, N. B. That intelligence was brought by the steamer Java, chartered by the British Government for the transport of the 78th Regiment from Canada to England, and very good news it must have been to military men anxious for the honor of the British arms, and for the lives of their comrades surrounded by circumstances of unusual peril.

The restoration of the British prestige in India, which we have from the first considered as merely a question of time, and which involves the reestablishment of British authority, seems to be proceeding with greater rapidity even than the best informed on Indian affairs had expected.

The victorious march of General Havelock upon Cawnpore had been followed up with extraordinary energy and success. This officer, who evidently inherits the spirit with the traditions of the great days of Clive, and who is a splendid specimen of those "Indian heroes," whose praises were so well and widely sung a short time since by the Parisian Journal des Débats, led his small force of three thousand men over a distance of one hundred and twenty-six miles under an Indian sun in the month of July, fought four successive battles, with armies of twice or thrice his numerical strength, captured twenty-four guns, and finally drove from his stronghold the most capable and the most culpable at once, of the leaders of the rebellion, Nana Sahib, of Bithoor, the soi-disant Peishwa of the Mahrattas.

This villain—whose infamous conduct after the surrender of Cawnpore has given us a new synonym for treachery and cruelty—fled from Bithoor with the remnants of his army, with the intention of joining the mutineers before Lucknow. But when he reached the banks of the Jumna his followers, seized with a sudden fear of the avenging army, whose wrath they had already so sharply felt, cast away their weapons and dispersed in every direction. Left alone with his family, and tasting in anticipation the terrible death which he knew himself to have richly earned, Nana sought destruction for himself and his household in the sacred stream, proving thus in his death as he had proved in his life, that he revered the religion of his fathers as little as the laws of that civilization whose refinements had ministered to his selfish sensuality, without affecting the savage temper of his soul.

The escape of such a fiendish wretch from the temporal reward of his crimes might have damped the triumph of General Havelock with regrets which all the world will share. For while the instinct of personal vengeance for personal wrongs is felt even by those who succumb to its temptations to be an evil thing, the desire of a righteous retribution visibly overtaking the tyrant and the traitor, is inseparable from that wholesome public spirit which maintains the character of a nation by quickening the national sense of honor and the national love of justice. Nana Sahib did us in America no injury, and therefore it is we in America who have a special right to lament that Nana Sahib was not made a spectacle to gods and men for the treasons he had done upon our common humanity.

If, however, the assassin of Cawnpore has been left to meet his victims before a tribunal higher than our own, there is every reason to anticipate that a speedy reckoning will now be had with his followers in other portions of the Northwestern Provinces of India.

Gen. Havelock marched from Cawnpore directly upon Lucknow, which place he had doubtless relieved in the course of the first week of August. Sir Colin Campbell, and his Chief of the Staff, General Mansfield, one of the ablest officers in the English army, had reached Calcutta, and troops were daily arriving from the various colonial stations, from Persia and from England. That a Sir Colin Campbell will go "into quarters" while a General Havelock can keep the field, is extremely improbable, and the siege of Delhi is more likely to have been pressed to a storm than to have been abandoned. But, be this as it may, the aspect of the latest news from India is more favorable to England than any which has been received since the mutiny broke out at Meerut. It is noted, we see, in some of our journals, as a symptom of fresh troubles, that difficulties had occurred "at Bundelcund." "Bundelcund," however, being not a town, but a district, and a very troublesome district, too, as the vexatious history of the Patam abundantly showeth, and being, moreover, afflicted with a city called Thuggi, which was one of the earliest centres of rebellion, and was the scene more than three months ago of a most frightful massacre, there would seem to be no particular reason for regarding "difficulties" there occurring either as in themselves surprising or as prognosticating an extension of the Mohammedan rising into regions hitherto tranquil.

The American Minister in France.—The Richmond Enquirer publishes, in a letter from Paris, a note from the Editor of the London Court Journal—stating that the paragraph alleging that Judge Mason had committed the impropriety of putting his arm upon the chair of the Empress, which has gone the rounds of American papers, credited to the Court Journal, never appeared in that paper. Whether the story was invented on this side of the Atlantic, or picked up among the personal scandals of which a certain class of Paris society is always full, is a matter of little consequence; it is unquestionably false and should never have found access to the columns of any American journal.

It is not the fashion, as the world knows, of American newspapers to deal very tenderly with the character or reputation of our Ministers abroad, or to consider that odium cast upon them falls upon the country which they represent. But we cannot help perceiving that for some reason or other, Judge Mason during his residence in France, has been visited with an unusual share of misrepresentation and abuse. Paris correspondents of some of our most violent party journals, seem to have devoted themselves, with wanton and pertinacious assiduity, to the task of ferreting every bit of gossip they can pick up concerning him, and of disparaging most unduly his abilities and qualifications for the place he holds. We believe there are very many Americans, of all parties—political opponents as well as friends of Mr. Mason—who have been led to hope that by his intercourse with the best men of Europe he would be enabled to do his country some service, which, if it be not marred by unjust acts of omission and commission, we all desire to see done. But if we are to judge by unjust, are all these assaults, and who have brought away, after personal knowledge and observation, a sincere respect for his character and a grateful conviction of his prompt and intelligent regard for American interests. He has had the great misfortune to be disabled by severe physical illness for many of the social enjoyments and duties pertaining to his position—but we venture to say that few American Ministers abroad bring to the discharge of their duties a clearer intellect or a better knowledge of the subjects they have occasion to discuss.

We think we have ground for saying, moreover, that the rumors which have been set afoot of any special anxiety on his part to retain his present office, are as unfounded as the other slanders to which we have referred. Unless recalled he will probably remain until the expiration of his official term;—but we do not believe that he will ask or desire to be retained an hour beyond it.

The Murder of Policeman Anderson.

On the morning of the 31st of July last, between 4 and 5 o'clock, a burglary was committed in the shoe-store of Mr. Sammis, situated at the corner of Grand and Centre-streets. The burglar, or burglars, entered the store through the door on Centre-street, which was broken open for the purpose. They carried off about six or seven dollars in pennies, together with some ladies' and gentlemen's shoes or gaiters. The pennies were done up in rolls of 25 and 50 each, and were wrapped in brown paper, as the clerk of Mr. Sammis has testified. In the basement of this house there lived, at the time, Mrs. Anoni and Jane, his wife. The latter rose about 4 o'clock on the morning of the 21st of July, and hearing a noise on the floor above, she called her husband, and told him there were robbers in the store. Both hastened up; and she, seeing an armed man wearing a dark hat and a dark coat, emerge from the store, cried out "Police!" "Stop thief!" The burglar, after threatening her with his weapon, passed on. Then the woman heard the report of a pistol, and shortly after she saw Policeman Anderson dead upon the sidewalk. The testimony of Mrs. Anoni, so far as it asserts that a man came out of the store with a pistol in his hand, is fully corroborated by her husband. In order to fasten the crime of murder upon the prisoner Cangemi, lately put upon his trial, it is necessary to connect him as well with the burglary as with the homicide. For, if he be guiltless of the former, no premeditated killing is made out. It is the theory of the prosecution that Cangemi went forth from his home that morning on a felonious excursion, and that, to escape arrest, he shot Policeman Anderson. This is murder under the statute, and to prove it against the prisoner in this case, it is important to establish that he was the burglar or one of the burglars who entered the store of Mr. Sammis, or was at least an accessory to that crime.

Let us, in the first place, analyze the evidence of the homicide. There were actual witnesses of the deed. Martin Lorze, while dragging a hand-cart, saw Anderson, just before his death, going rapidly from Centre to Grand-street. The officer was attracted, doubtless, by Mrs. Anoni's cry of "Police! Stop thief!" The witness, at the same instant, recognized Cangemi coming from Centre-street and as he advanced towards the policeman, he fired at him, and then ran in the direction of Elm-street. Ann Elizabeth Smith, a colored woman, saw Cangemi in company with others, walking along Centre-street before the hour of the burglary. She saw him enter Mr. Sammis' store; she saw him afterwards threaten Mrs. Anoni with his weapon; and, finally, she saw him shoot the policeman, and then fly down Elm-street. Daniel Lalor, a butcher, saw a man, whom he could only recognize as wearing a dark loose coat, and a dark hat, point something at Mrs. Anoni, then meet Policeman Anderson, who was hastening to the spot, shoot him, and immediately escape, turning the southeast corner of Elm-street. Philip Hickman swears to nearly the same facts. Officer Underhill left the deceased at the northeast corner of Centre and Grand streets, at twenty minutes past 4 on the morning of the murder. He had scarcely walked fifty yards when he heard the pistol shot; he immediately returned, and arrived just in time to receive his comrade in his arms as he fell mortally wounded. Officer Underhill saw at this moment a person, whom he thought was Cangemi, turning the corner of Elm-street, and in answer to the questions of those who now came up, he directed them thither in pursuit of the assassin.

We have thus the positive testimony of several witnesses who recognized Cangemi as the man who shot Policeman Anderson. They all agree in stating that, after he committed the homicide, he turned into Elm-street. While running down this street, he is again personally recognized by William H. Ripperger and Andrew Dorr. The former heard the report of the pistol, and the next instant he saw the prisoner running, followed by the officers. There are, moreover, a cloud of witnesses to prove the course of Cangemi's entire flight, from the place of the murder to his own home in No. 120 Worth-street. It is established that on the way, either to facilitate his escape or to conceal his identity, he flung off his coat and hat, and we can arrive at no other reasonable conclusion, after a close examination of the evidence, than that the pistol found in the area of No. 33 Howard-street was thrown away by the prisoner, and was the identical weapon with which he committed the homicide. At the last, when pursued to his own room in No. 120 Worth-street and arrested by the officers, Cangemi exclaims, without being in any way interrogated, "Me no shoot." Upon this evidence the public prosecutor held it to be perfectly established that Michael Cangemi was the individual who shot Policeman Anderson on the morning of the 31st of July last.

The second point for consideration is the motive for the crime. Was Cangemi, as the prosecution contend, engaged in a felonious enterprise, and did he kill the officer to escape arrest? In a word, was he implicated in the burglary committed that morning at the corner of Grand and Centre streets? No one can have any moral doubt but that some man committed the burglary, killed the policeman. This, however, is not legal proof. We must see what the evidence is. We have, thus far, place Mrs. Anoni's evidence, that the burglar carried a pistol; he had the power to commit the crime. Mrs. Anoni saw a man come out of the store; she saw the man who had the power to commit the crime. Immediately after, she heard the report of a pistol, and hastening up again found Anderson dying on the sidewalk. Here is strong circumstantial evidence that the burglar and the homicide were one and the same. Mrs. Anoni further swears that the burglar wore a dark hat and dark coat, such as Cangemi is proved to have flung away in his flight. But there is more direct proof than this of Cangemi's connection with the burglary. Ann Elizabeth Smith knew him and recognized him as the man who came out of the store. She recognized him as the man who threatened Mrs. Anoni with a pistol, and who then shot Policeman Anderson with the same weapon. Daniel Lalor testifies substantially to the same fact, so that we have two witnesses who positively recognize the burglar in the murderer. Were further testimony needed, it may be found in the fact that a skeleton key was discovered in the prisoner's coat pocket. His room, when examined, is said to have resembled an arsenal, filled with guns, pistols, powder-flasks and bowie-knives. None of this is explained. Finally, in the pockets of the coat which Cangemi flung away, a large quantity of pennies are found. Some of them are rolled up in brown paper parcels which resemble those abstracted from the store of Mr. Sammis, at the corner of Grand and Centre streets. The prisoner was laden with this coin when he fled after the homicide, and divers witnesses testify that he dropped a large number of pennies on the road. This, we may observe, is the only point in the prosecution which the defence attempts to refute. The woman who has lived with the prisoner for the last twenty years is put upon the stand, and she swears that on the morning of the murder, Cangemi asked her for coppers—that she had two dollars and a half in pennies in a drawer, and that after he went out they were not there. Admitting that this very suspicious evidence is true, the woman did not see Cangemi take the pennies; but whether he did take them or not, the fact that sundry parcels of pennies, done up in brown paper and resembling those stolen from the store of Mr. Sammis, were found in his coat pockets, is not controverted. Even if we put this issue aside altogether, the evidence against the prisoner is still overwhelming. It is proved by his own mistress that he left his house a short time before the burglary was committed. It is proved that he passed along Centre-street and burglariously entered the store of Mr. Sammis. It is proved that he was interrupted in the commission of his crime by the man and his wife who lived in the basement—that he first threatened them with his pistol, but seeing them too frightened to interrupt his progress, passed on—that immediately after, he encountered Policeman Anderson, and shot him to escape arrest—that from the spot where the murder was committed he ran through Elm-street to his own home in Worth-street, where he was arrested, having been pursued step by step in his flight. Many witnesses have been brought forward by the defence to prove the prisoner's previous good character. This only makes his present position more lamentable, and gives plausibility to the supposition that the unfortunate man in a vain effort to conceal the burglary in which he was detected, madly added to it the crime of murder.

In so plain a case, it is difficult to understand why the Jury have been unable to agree. At a late hour last night, after being closeted together for over thirty hours, they had not rendered a verdict.

The Passion for Gambling.

There are thousands of men in New-York to-day—we might say, for that matter, hundreds of thousands—who have passed the last three weeks on a bed of thorns, and to whom the next will bring no relief. There are thousands who, being to all outside appearance prosperous merchants, would give a great deal that the unlucky notion of being merchants at all had never occurred to them, and that they followed any profession under heaven which did not involve the necessity of meeting bills on a certain day, and begging money from bankers. There are thousands living in fine houses who would wish the houses were in Jericho, if they thought their removal to that celebrated locality would bring the owners six months' peace of mind. There are thousands more, who, whether lucky or unlucky, in a five-dollar boarding-house, or in a Fifth-avenue mansion, never, under any circumstances, from the beginning to the end of the year, know what it is to go to bed with a light heart, and all this, not because of extraordinary and unavoidable misfortunes, but because they are blind, inveterate irreclaimable gamblers.

We are in the midst of a crisis, in which more innocent people, unhappily, are suffering, than the guilty, brought on mainly by the furious haste of the commercial world to get rich by hook or crook. Two-thirds of the anxious, worn, cadaverous visages, which flit up and down Wall-street in agony, any of these days, belong to men, who start in life with one of two great objects: to be President of the United States, or as rich as Mr. Astor. As there cannot be more than one President of the United States at a time, as the office cannot be had by any amount of successful stock-jobbing, the majority specially abandon all hope of presiding over the destinies of this great nation, and fix their whole attention upon Mr. Astor's fortune. The accumulation of so large a sum of money as this gentleman is popularly supposed to possess, is attended, even in this great country, with considerable difficulty, but no man in New-York need abandon the hope of amassing something approximating to it, however distantly. To do this somehow, is the great thing; to do it quickly, is a still greater. The first step is to get out of the boarding-house into one of one's own, purchasing a brown-stone front, and furnished with corresponding magnificence. A large house is the god of a New-Yorker's idolatry. It is his paradise, the source of his thriving, the haven of his rest, the nurse of his heroes, and the mother of his ambition. With this he is proof against the arrows of fate. For this he makes delight and loves laborious days; and for this there is no obstacle however determined, he will not, with long odds however great he will not brave. The

There is a very general apprehension breaking up among the Mormons in this Eastern section of country. We have already noticed the discontinuance of the Mormon newspaper published in this City, and the suspension of religious worship at their usual place in Broome-street. We hear also that, last Sunday, at their head-quarters, at Tom's River, N. J., where there has been a small colony for some time, it was announced that hereafter they would be no more public services there. We understand that in Philadelphia measures are in progress for closing up the Mormon Church there; public worship is to be discontinued, and all the business affairs of the sect are to be wound up forthwith. This has the appearance of decay and dissolution; but we are inclined to think that it indicates a change of policy, and that the Mormons in all parts of the country, are to be summoned to Utah. Instead of supporting missionary agencies in the Eastern States, it is thought best to concentrate their forces at head-quarters. We understand that the New-York Society will take up their line of march for Utah in the early Spring.

The Case of Donnelly.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: In your article in last Tuesday's paper on the Hoyt-Lent trial, it is alleged that the sleeve-buttons of Mr. Lent, the deceased, were found in his wife's room all bloody. This is not true. According to the evidence produced on the trial, they were found in their proper place, and not DONNELLY'S. By correcting the above you will oblige Yours respectfully,

F. DONNELLY.

We regret that there should have been a misapprehension of the particular point in the evidence alluded to by our correspondent. Mr. DONNELLY is correct in stating that the sleeve-buttons of the deceased Mormon were found in his own room and not in the prisoner's.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—There was an excellent attendance last night to witness the performance of VANDENHOFF from "Bronze!" The part included the images of LE GRANDE, VARVELL, MACCARTHUY, and [illegible]. Our whole article is only necessary to say that Mr. GRANDE was, as usual, excellent; VARVELL [illegible] not entirely successful; MACCARTHUY a little deeper than his voice permitted, but excellent; and MACCARTHUY very acceptable. This gentleman shines to greater advantage in this opera than in any of his previous efforts. He gave a forcible and creditable interpretation of the role. The chorus and orchestra were not quite up to the usual standard, but there was no deficiency which interfered seriously with the general performance of the work. On Friday "I Puritani" will be given.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—Mr. MATHEWS appeared here last night in a new face called, "Aggravating Sam," and created, of course, another success. The title of the play gives the key to the character of the hero—a sort of human mosquito, who buzzes about every one's ears, and is excessively annoying to the unhappy victims who come in his way. He takes a sardonic delight in aggravating people, and does it with such skill that in this instance he secures a wife as the reward of his persistency—and especially of a corpulent gentleman who conceives that he has a prior claim in the lady's hand. Aggravating Sam is exactly one of those nervous twitchy characters which Mr. MATHEWS can realize so completely. He keeps the audience in a constant roar of laughter, and was of course, the prop and mainstay of the piece. There are several other characters which are ably sustained by Mr. and Mrs. SKEAN and other members of the company.

Movements of the Filibusters in New-York and Elsewhere—Sailing of the Testaments.

Senator RUNDELL has replied officially to Mr. McKEON's letter of inquiries in relation to the movements of the filibusters in the City of New-York. The Senator says he is as the lock-out for them; and as there are few men who are more familiar with all the whole matter than he is, it is probable that any information he may be enabled to give will be [illegible]. If we are correctly informed, Mr. RUNDELL will have no doubt [illegible] time to come. The attempts [illegible] for Nicaragua have thus far been confined to the enlistment of men who intend visiting Nicaragua in the city of New-Orleans and to it alone. It is true, also, that the friends of the new expedition expect aid from Charleston and other Southern cities, but they expect nothing in the way of men from New-York. They say that New-York has heretofore furnished some brave and efficient officers, but they claim to speak from experience when they say that such private soldiers as can be obtained from New-York for that country are not worth their rations. The money, arms, ammunition and provisions from this City they have a very favorable opinion of, and expect a liberal continuation of such donations during the new enterprise; but that is all they want. It is even extremely doubtful whether any of the old and tried soldiers from New-York will be invited to join the new expedition, with the exception of General HANDY. It is claimed that the new expedition will be officered by West Point men, who have received what is called large inducements to give their aid to the movement.

It is also pretty well settled that Gen. WALKER will not go back as the military chief of the expedition. He will probably go out and proclaim himself President of Nicaragua. After doing so, it is expected that he will occupy himself in civil matters, leaving the military affairs of his predecessor entirely to others.

The other expedition that is said to be sitting on the Texas, for a descent upon a portion of Mexico, is now generally believed to be not a part of the new expedition to Nicaragua, which, it is claimed, will be [illegible] equipped and provisioned of all the filibustering Expeditions that heretofore have left the United States. The sailing of the Texas is fixed upon by many as the first movement towards that direction. She is loaded for Matamoras, and some currently reported rumors that a large quantity of arms, ammunition and provisions is to be found on board, and that she will touch at the mouth of the Rio Grande and take in the men and additional supplies from that point. This such is the intention is denied by those who are familiar with the progress of the movement—who claim that the expedition is not yet ready to leave our shores. The Texas, however, is to be ready to embark at a moment's notice, if necessary, to do so, and it is expected that she will sail at an early date, even if they do not.

The exact amount of treasure lost by the Central America is not known, but is estimated, including gold in private hands, at $1,700,000, and the steamer and cargo at $200,000, making an aggregate as large as the loss of forty vessels averaging $50,000 each. Subtracting this loss, the disasters for the month of September would not be large.

Loss of Schooner Guilford.

Capt. HEWERSON, of the schooner Guilford, makes the following statement respecting the loss of his vessel:

The Guilford sailed from Savannah for Nassau, N. P., with a cargo of lumber and provisions, on the 12th inst., and at 6 P. M. of that date found the vessel had sprung a leak; started the pumps and got her almost clear; at 12 o'clock the wind and sea increasing, the water soon gained on her, and at 4 A. M. she filled and capsized on her beam ends in lat. 30° 50', and lon. 61°. The crew all succeeded in lashing themselves to the side, where they remained until the 14th when they were taken off by Capt. TREAT. From them every kindness and attention was received, the officers supplying us with clothes, and everything else necessary for our comfort.

Manufacturing Establishments.

The severe financial pressure compels very nearly all the great manufacturing establishments of the country either to suspend or greatly to curtail their operations. Two Companies in New-Brunswick within a few days have discharged over three hundred hands.

The Print Works in Manchester, N. H., have decided not to run their mills Fridays and Saturdays which is equivalent to curtailing their business one-third.

Nearly all the cotton and woolen mills of Philadelphia have stopped,—a few working up the material which they happen to have on hand. Over 4,000 persons are thrown out of employment.

The Pacific Company's Knitting Mill at Manchester, Conn., is running on short time. One or two paper mills in Tolland County have stopped business altogether.

The several Iron Companies at Troy continue their operations as usual, but they have given notice that their payments to workmen will be made quarterly instead of weekly, as heretofore.

Three cotton factories in Georgia have recently suspended operations.

In this City we hear of considerable reductions in manufacturing establishments. Thousands of persons will be thrown out of employment as the result of the financial difficulties,—those, too, whose own support, with that of their families, was derived entirely from the wages of their daily labor. The coming Winter seems likely to be one of extreme suffering for the laboring poor.

MILK SEVEN CENTS A QUART.—To-day, a large number of our milkmen put up the price of milk to 7 cents a quart. The reason adduced for this rise in price at the end of a season of unequaled abundance of pasture and extraordinary hay-harvesting, is the increased charge for milk freight over the Harlem Road, with a threat of a like increase on the Erie and other roads. Hitherto milk has cost 3½ cents a quart in the country; and its waste on transportation was ½ of a cent more per quart, and freight over the Harlem Road ½ of a cent more. But now freight is raised to 1 cent a quart, which would make the cost to the wholesale milk-dealer 5 cents a quart, at his depôt. To deliver 150 quarts a day at a quart to a family, is an average round. But the wagon, horse and driver costs $2 50 a day to serve this round; that is, 1⅔ of a cent per quart more are to be added to the milkman's expenses—making it cost him 6⅔ cents when handed over to Biddy at the basement gate.

If these figures are correctly stated, the milkman gets one-third of a cent profit on every quart that he delivers at seven cents to his customer. If people supposed that they got the genuine article, they would not grumble at the price; but for the blue milky Croton that is generally announced as "Me-cel-ko," it is a pretty steep price, and for the rectified swill slope that, under the sacred name of "pure Orange County milk," poisons our children, it is an outrageous price. If people would stop as long to learn the character of the milk they feed their families with as of the boots and coats they wear, they would find at the hands of some dealer such milk as babies used to thrive on—milk that can grow a cream over night, or be curdled by the official "bung of alum as big as a pigeon's egg," on an emergency, and no reasonable charge for it would be dear. Meat has gone up; flour has gone up; but milk has years ago was eight cents a quart, while yesterday six cents was the standard price. If they would only give such milk as our fathers had, it would be the cheapest article on our tables; but laugh! the stuff they call milk! and the dairymen quake if it is doctored in!

A PROTEST BY THE WRECK OF THE CENTRAL AMERICA.—The survivors of the wreck, officers, passengers, etc., have addressed to the shareholders of the Central America Company, from Philadelphia, on the Saturday afternoon after the wreck, a protest against the action of the Company in sending the steamer Philadelphia to the scene of the wreck, instead of the steamer Star of the West, which was nearer, and better adapted to the service. The protest also alleges that the Philadelphia was not provisioned for the service, and that the Star of the West was. The protest also alleges that the Philadelphia was not provided with a proper number of boats, and that the Star of the West was. The protest also alleges that the Philadelphia was not provided with a proper number of officers, and that the Star of the West was. The protest also alleges that the Philadelphia was not provided with a proper number of men, and that the Star of the West was. MADEMOISELLE'S MANTILLAS.
Arrived per New-York Herald of Sept. 28.
The New-York Herald, in sending the rich and varied styles of Mantillas for this establishment, displays an unusual variety.
The Marsilia department we have the richest velvets, the costliest lace, and the most extensive trimmings.
The Bozzaris, exhibited by MACKENZIE, is made of the richest Genoa velvet, trimmed in a novel manner with Chantilly lace. The sleeves are of the fashionable shape, made on the front plan, and have a heavy bouillonné lace or stripe of Chantilly lace, graduated from the wrist to the shoulder. This has a light and elegant appearance, and is certainly a most pleasing innovation.
The Bozzaris Mantilla is likewise composed of velvet, and is trimmed round and round, each point, and in a manner which will be worn by many of our ladies with true Spanish grace.
The Bozzaris Hamon, or Moorish Mantillas, are of a peculiar combination of some which are so pleasant to the eye, that we have ventured to call it beauty in a fog forever.
The Bozzaris Mantilla has the indispensable hood, leading to the conventional shape for a hood than, to a Spanish Mantilla.
The "Zaire" is a very large velvet cloak, with wide sleeves, and a small double cape, pointed at the back, and ending with bugle tassels. Three rows of lace form a border round the bottom of the cloak.
The "Isabella Chatouse" is correctly graceful, and of a proportionate proportions. It ought to have been called the "Isabella" from its resembling one of her superb dresses. It has no sleeves, but is looped up where the arm will rest on the chair, and these are also supplied with the fashionable lace, and complete the whole of the decorations; and, indeed, nothing more is required.
The "Fontainebleau," beautiful and modest, steals into favor like the fair creature after whom it is named. It is composed of the finest French gray beaver cloth, with very wide sleeves, trimmed in a plain and ornamental manner. A broad fold of fine drab velvet, with deep lace, gives the effect of costly fur. The "Fontainebleau" is much more durable than furs, and surround the hood, which is novel and striking in form. The cost of these garments is exceedingly moderate, considering their beauty and the expensive character of the materials of which they are composed.
The "Kalispa" is a pretty mantle for October. The [illegible] small sleeves, and shaped bottom, with a border of velvet, marked into [illegible], placed on the velvet, and [illegible] over two deep black lace flounces, which are covering the entire skirt.

The machine [illegible] instructions was given, and the two each took [illegible] their names wherever opportunity offered. But the worst of it is they refused to pay the money, and that [illegible] complained to Deputy Superintendent of Police Van Tassel.

Row Among the Firemen.—On Sunday night a number of members of the East District of Brooklyn Fire Department, visited Swenson's lager-bier saloon in the Sixteenth Ward, where they got drunk on lager and then commenced breaking tumblers and other articles near at hand over each other's heads. About the time everything movable inside of the establishment was broken, the Sixth Precinct Police arrived and arrested several of the ringleaders.

Perfidious.—A boy named John Manahan was arrested in Brooklyn, on Sunday, for attempting to rob Martin Wallace, who had refused to supply him with liquor. Wallace keeps a place in Columbia-street.

Arrests.—The Police of Brooklyn made 44 arrests during the 48 hours ending Monday morning.

Fatal Accident.—Mrs. Eliza Hennessey, residing at No. 84 Hudson-avenue, Brooklyn, while intoxicated Tuesday evening, fell down a flight of stairs. She escaped without much damage, but a young child in her arms at the time, was so badly injured that it died shortly afterwards.

Death at the Hospital.—Edward Dunn, one of the men run over on the Long Island Railroad on the night of the 26th inst., died at the Brooklyn City Hospital yesterday.

Accident.—Policeman Walsh, of the Fifth Precinct, Brooklyn, was seriously injured Tuesday, while attempting to stop a runaway horse.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Jersey City and Hoboken Banks.—The Banks working under the General Security Law of New-Jersey, are required to deposit with the State Treasurer stocks of the States of Virginia, Kentucky and Massachusetts, or (by special enactment) Jersey City Water Stock and Newark City Scrip, to the full amount of their circulation. These stocks are taken by the State Treasurer at their market value, and if, at any time, they should depreciate, the Banks are compelled by the law to make such depreciation good by the return of their bills. The stocks are further required to produce 6 per cent. per annum.

The following banks of New-Jersey are operating under this "General Banking Law." They differ from those working under special charters, inasmuch as every bill is countersigned by the State Treasurer: Hudson County Bank, Jersey City; Mechanics' and Traders', Jersey City; Bank of Jersey City, Jersey City; Hoboken City Bank, Jersey City; Bergen County Bank, Hackensack; Passaic County Bank, Paterson; Cataract City Bank, Paterson; Frenchtown Bank, Frenchtown; The Freehold Banking Company, Freehold; American Bank, Trenton.

Military Visit to the State Fair.—The "Washington Greys," of Hudson city, accompanied by the officers of the "National Guard," Hoboken, and the officers of Jersey City "Continentals," as guests, are to make an excursion to New-Brunswick to-day, and will visit the State Fair.

Accepted.—Captain James T. Hatfield, of Hoboken, who was recently elected to the vacant Brigadier-Generalship, caused by the promotion of Gen. E. R. V. Wagner, has formally accepted the position and will enter upon its duties immediately.

Obstructions on Sidewalks.—The new ordinance relative to the removal of obstructions from the sidewalks in Jersey-City goes into operation to-day. It prohibits the obstructions of the walks with barrels, boxes and other rubbish, and the Street Commissioner expresses a determination to rigidly enforce its provisions.

Wednesday, Sept. 30—P. M.

The result of the conference of yesterday afternoon among the Bank Presidents of this City was correctly, though at the time not officially, given in our last paper. They resolved unanimously to increase their discounts about three millions of dollars, or 5 ⅌ cent. on their present lines respectively, within the next seven days. The relief is to be granted in about equal proportions at each of the semi-weekly discount sessions of the week. The conference represented forty odd Banks, out of the fifty-four. Several Presidents not able to be present—among others Mr. Stevens, of the Bank of Commerce, (the largest capital in the City,) have intimated their concurrence in the resolution of relief. All the Banks, so far as we are advised, whose first discount session was held this morning, acted fully up to the resolution—among others the Phœnix and Merchants'. The Boston Bank Presidents, this morning, also resolved upon an immediate extension of three millions. The managers of the Bleecker-street Bank for Savings this morning resolved to turn their $600,000 United States Stocks into Gold at 110 ⅌ cent. And the Sub-Treasury again paid out $460,000 in excess of its receipts. These measures, in the aggregate, prevent a positive retraction of the pressure in New-York and New-England of seven millions of dollars; nearly the whole of which has yet to be felt upon business. We noticed yesterday that the Bowery Savings Institution had ordered the sale of one million U. S. Stocks, and that the Sub-Treasury paid out $600,000 over its receipts. So that, including the California remittance, fully due in a day or so, the preparations for pecuniary aid to the mercantile public (of which nearly half will be a direct accession of Gold to the Banking movement,) during the week will equal ten millions dollars. And in view of this fact, we feel that the declaration of yesterday, that the "better time" is at hand, may be repeated with all confidence. If there be any virtue in the addition of four millions of Gold to a reserve already deemed strong for a creditor City, and with the European Exchanges at 102@105 ⅌ cent., it certainly is.

There is, we think, another important point fully gained to-day. The States of New-York and New-England, with their important two commercial cities, are to continue to pay specie. This is so with New-York, and the advices from Boston, Hartford, New-Haven, &c., authorize the belief that the determination is not less conclusive in that quarter. It was the apprehension that the redeeming Banks here, the Metropolitan and American Exchange, might be compelled to discredit the whole New-England currency, that gave rise to much of the anxious concern on the Street yesterday. The shutting down of the Rhode Island banks on Monday authorized the doubt felt on the subject. It is extremely fortunate that our redeeming Banks resolved to risk the chances of the other New-England States standing up for a day or two longer. It looks this afternoon as though the danger had been passed, and our good friends in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other suspended points will have to adjust their exchanges with New-York and the East accordingly. In regard to the South, it is quite evident from the surprise and reluctance with which the Philadelphia event was received all along the Southern Atlantic coast, and at Nashville and New-Orleans, that all the Cotton States, whose great crop is just ready for market, will probably insist upon the Specie standard. The Northwest may not be able to do so, but we have no positive information that the Banks in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, or Missouri, will yield to the pressure; although great embarrassment and numerous suspensions have fallen upon the private banking houses in that quarter. From Kentucky we have no conclusive information. The Banks in that State are pretty strong, and the people not given to currency panics.

The relief to the money market to-day is not very decided, outside of bank, owing to the continued reluctance of private money-lenders to come freely again into the discount offices. The fresh mercantile failures this week have been few, and comparatively unimportant in the extent of liabilities, but the previous disasters of this sort here—some of them we hear turning out badly—and the long list from Philadelphia, have induced more caution in discounting paper than is consistent with the approaching wants of the borrower for the October payments. The occasional rates privately made this week, are 2@3@5 ⅌ cent. a month; in many of the cases the bills being bought in by the original makers. The Discount Brokers to-day are not able to name any thing like a fair quotation. In other respects, however, the market does feel relief: Exchange could be placed early in the day for the Persia's mail, and most regular dealers with moderate wants could get accommodation at bank to the extent of their current payments to the bank. The exceptions are with some few of the banks who had over-discounted their active means heretofore, and several of whom, in consequence, have had to ask the Clearing-House association to re-discount part of their bills receivable. The Exchanges with Philadelphia are a little better, and but for the continued want of harmonious policy in the banks of that city in their dealings with each other, we should look for a further rise. We quote: 93@92½ ⅌ cent. or 7@7½ discount; Baltimore Bank Checks, 93@94 ⅌ cent.; Boston, 99@99½ ⅌ cent. Rhode Island and all Western points unsettled. At Richmond, where the mountain branch notes are employed by the banks as currency, checks on New-York are 103 ⅌ cent. The accounts from Philadelphia of the suspension, and from New-York of the utter derangement of the Foreign Exchanges, have greatly embarrassed business at New-Orleans, according to latest telegraphic advices.

The rise in the Stock Market yesterday was rather ahead of relief to money affairs, and was not sustained to-day. Prices opened with some degree of strength at about yesterday's figures, but soon after a very decided heaviness came over the whole market, and this continued on the Street between the sessions of the Board. In the afternoon the fluctuations were in favor of recovery again, and the latest Street sales, after the close of the official list, were at an advance of 1 ⅌ cent. on two or three of the speculatives, with a firmer feeling in the dividend Stocks. In Road shares, in the course of the day, Erie sold at 13¼@12¾@11¼@11@12@12½; Reading, 35@34½@32@31¼@32¼@34; New-York Central, 91¼@90¾@90¾@90; Illinois Central Bonds, 77@76@75@77. These were the most marked variations, and showed the general feverishness of the dealings of the day, which was imputed to various rumors of a damaging character in regard to the payment of certain railway interest to-morrow. The correction of one of these stories on the spot, and of another by telegraph from Philadelphia, led to the recovery in prices in the afternoon. The market left off with a disposition to firmness. Bank Stocks were lower, with the exception of Commerce, which, from 75 yesterday afternoon, sold at 85 and then at 82 ⅌ cent. Metropolitan sold at 75, and Bank of New-York at 98. Missouri sixes were steady at 67½ in the forenoon, selling afterwards at 66½ ⅌ cent.

The half-yearly interest on the Construction Bonds of the Illinois Central Railroad will be paid to-morrow, (Oct. 1,) at the office of the Company, No. 54 Wall-street. The interest on the 7 ⅌ Cents. of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Road, St. Mary's Falls Ship Canal, Detroit and Pontiac Road and Buffalo and State Line Road will be paid by Duncan, Sherman & Co.

The Street was filled to-day with anonymous or irresponsible Bank notes "Extras," pretending to report fresh country Bank failures. The public, in respect to New-York and New-England country bank notes had best make inquiry direct at the Metropolitan or American Exchange Banks, when in doubt as to any bank thus anonymously impeached.

The latest telegraphic advice in town from Tennessee Banks is to the effect that all the unchartered banks, the Planters', Union and Bank of Tennessee, and some of the free banks, will steadily maintain specie payments.

The Albany Evening Journal of this afternoon says:

It has been the rule of the Bank Department since 1844 that the securities deposited by Banking Associations shall not be reduced below $100,000, being required to place that amount in the Department by the law of 1844 before commencing the business of banking. Under the original act the Comptroller, whose powers were subsequently conferred upon the Superintendent of the Bank Department, was authorized to return securities upon the surrender of notes, and the question of a continuance of that power, notwithstanding the act of 1844, was not mooted until recently. The great return of bank circulation and the steady contraction of the currency has made it desirable that banks should avail themselves of the securities in the Department by surrendering their notes as a means of security of protection to the public and a means of managing themselves through the present crisis. The Superintendent, which controls the decision upon the question, has given every facility for its decision and for the relief of the Banks concerned, consistent with a proper regard for the public interest, contented himself with resting upon a case made upon the application of the Syracuse City Bank to Judge Hunt, before whom it was argued yesterday. The able decision of that Jurist, which has the concurrence of Judges Green and W. B. Wright, we give below—and it will be seen that it is in favor of the application of the Bank.

Telegraphic Reports of the Financial Troubles.

The Boston Banks—Relief Afforded.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

At the adjourned meeting of Bank Presidents to-day it was decided to discount during the week about ten per cent. of their capital, making nearly $2,000,000. This will ease the market and largely restore public confidence.

The proposition to discount 10 per cent. has been signed by all the Presidents of the Banks, and the movement has given a brighter aspect to financial affairs.

The failure of Bowen, Kuhn & Hill, extensive hardware dealers, was announced to-day.

Immediate Action of the Philadelphia Banks.

Philadelphia, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Banks are still pursuing an inharmonious course, causing trouble and vexation to business men. The Pennsylvania Bank refuses for the present to come into an arrangement with the other banks, fearing that her largest depositors will remove their balances to other banks, creating a large indebtedness to them, which could not at once be settled without difficulty.

Arrangements are making to place her on a firm basis. The other Banks are at variance, refusing to receive the certified checks of each other. There is confusion in all the arrangements of parties having notes due, while the funds are locked up. The people feel outraged at the want of system, and the necessity for a Clearing House is becoming daily of more importance.

The Alleghany City Bank.

Pittsburg, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Alleghany City Bank continues specie payment on all its notes and deposits.

Suspension in Chicago.

Chicago, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Swift Brothers' and Johnston's Banks temporarily suspended this morning.

There is but little excitement here.

The State Savings Bank in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Tuesday, Sept. 29.

There is no run on the State Savings Institution, but, on the contrary, an increase of deposits and of openings of new accounts. All excitement seems over.

The State Bank of Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Board of Control of the State Bank of Ohio, at a meeting held here to-day, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the branches of the State Bank of Ohio have the ability, and will continue specie payment, regardless of whatever course may be taken by the Banks of other States.

The Peninsular Bank of Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Peninsular Bank of this city has been enjoined by Attorney-General Howard, on account of its refusal to surrender to the State Treasurer its circulating notes, as required by its charter. It is said that the Bank has abundant means to pay its debts.

Money Affairs in Other Cities.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

There was very little excitement in monetary circles yesterday, though it is still to be regretted that the action of the Banks was not as consistent and uniform yesterday as could be desired, or as was expected it would be, from the course said to have been agreed on by the Bank Presidents on Monday. It was by that body determined to afford the public a currency, by paying out bank bills, large and small, on checks—the bills to be considered irredeemable in coin for the present. This proposition was rejected by the Southwark Bank, by public notice in yesterday's morning papers, and was not carried out to any extent by any of the banks. There was not much uniformity in what was done. Some of the banks paid out country bank paper, and others their own bills of the larger denominations. Small amounts of coin were paid in some instances, and where customers were refractory and disposed to be troublesome, the rule not to pay larger amounts was violated. The agreement entered into to receive on deposit, at all the banks, the notes of the Bank of Pennsylvania, was not carried into effect, except partially, we believe, by the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank. The cause of this was in consequence of the refusal of the Bank of Pennsylvania to enter at once on such an arrangement as had been presented to it. The officers of that institution say, that it has been out of line for some days and has necessarily suffered discredit. A very considerable amount of its circulation has returned from the country, and would at once find its way into the other city banks. A very considerable portion of its depositors, too, some two or three of them holding quite large balances, would also, in all probability, remove them into other banks. A sudden movement of this sort would leave the Bank of Pennsylvania without business and would make her debtor in a single day to the amount probably of three or four hundred thousand dollars! Had the other banks, in making the arrangement to go into immediate effect, designed to entrap the Bank of Pennsylvania in its prejudice, they could scarcely have hit on a more effectual plan. We have no idea, however, that any such purpose was designed. It is only another evidence of the inconsiderate action that has characterized nearly all the doings of the banks since the commencement of the difficulties among them. The Bank of Pennsylvania, as soon as advised of the arrangement of the other banks, immediately informed them that it would not agree to an immediate arrangement of credits. It was, however, ready in a few days, at a date to be agreed on. The President of the Bank is positive, his arrangements, and will not be interfered, consent to participate in any gen[illegible]

THE PENINSULAR BANK OF DETROIT.

Detroit, Mich., Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Peninsular Bank of this city has been enjoined by Attorney-General Howard, on account of its refusal to surrender to the State Treasurer its circulating notes, as required by its charter. It is said that the Bank has abundant means to pay its debts.

Money Affairs in Other Cities.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

There was very little excitement in monetary circles yesterday, though it is still to be regretted that the action of the Banks was not as consistent and uniform yesterday as could be desired, or as was expected it would be, from the course said to have been agreed on by the Bank Presidents on Monday. It was by that body determined to afford the public a currency, by paying out bank bills, large and small, on checks—the bills to be considered irredeemable in coin for the present. This proposition was rejected by the Southwark Bank, by public notice in yesterday's morning papers, and was not carried out to any extent by any of the banks. There was not much uniformity in what was done. Some of the banks paid out country bank paper, and others their own bills of the larger denominations. Small amounts of coin were paid in some instances, and where customers were refractory and disposed to be troublesome, the rule not to pay larger amounts was violated. The agreement entered into to receive on deposit, at all the banks, the notes of the Bank of Pennsylvania, was not carried into effect, except partially, we believe, by the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank. The cause of this was in consequence of the refusal of the Bank of Pennsylvania to enter at once on such an arrangement as had been presented to it. The officers of that institution say, that it has been out of line for some days and has necessarily suffered discredit. A very considerable amount of its circulation has returned from the country, and would at once find its way into the other city banks. A very considerable portion of its depositors, too, some two or three of them holding quite large balances, would also, in all probability, remove them into other banks. A sudden movement of this sort would leave the Bank of Pennsylvania without business and would make her debtor in a single day to the amount probably of three or four hundred thousand dollars! Had the other banks, in making the arrangement to go into immediate effect, designed to entrap the Bank of Pennsylvania in its prejudice, they could scarcely have hit on a more effectual plan. We have no idea, however, that any such purpose was designed. It is only another evidence of the inconsiderate action that has characterized nearly all the doings of the banks since the commencement of the difficulties among them. The Bank of Pennsylvania, as soon as advised of the arrangement of the other banks, immediately informed them that it would not agree to an immediate arrangement of credits. It was, however, ready in a few days, at a date to be agreed on. The President of the Bank is positive, his arrangements, and will not be interfered, consent to participate in any gen[illegible] right. We do not believe that the Boston banks will be induced to resume specie payments although they are advised to by persons who see no other way of getting rid of their own responsibilities! By the new Constitution of the State of New-York any bank that suspends specie payment must go at once into liquidation, so no legislative aid can be extended to them in such an event. In Connecticut, the Bank Commissioners will not, it is understood, sanction a suspension, neither is there any intention or desire among the banks of this city to do so.

From the Boston Post.

The Boston Banks stand $600,000 better, as to coin, than they stood ten days ago, and exchange with New-York is in their favor, rendering it almost certain that specie will continue to flow hither from Wall-street. The amount of Philadelphia collections and discounted paper now in the Boston Banks is not enough to hurt the latter, even with a high premium for the change of the avails into coin, as the paper matures. Moreover, Boston owes Philadelphia large sums for coal, at this season of the year, and these sums will offset a large portion of the Philadelphia paper, now in State-street, either for collection or discount. Future collections and discounts will be at the charge and risk of individuals, as long as the suspension lasts. The Banks will act as agents only.

Our money market, so far as our banks and approved bank customers is concerned, is now on the verge of improvement. A few days longer, doubtless, and it will be materially better. The only thing to be done by the banks and the merchants is to stand firm, aiding each other as much as possible, not expecting too much from each other.

If the New-York banks stand firm there is not any reason now visible for apprehension of the Boston banks which have always been very strong, except in specie, and which are daily gaining strength in the important particulars. The only external call for gold that we can possibly have is from New-York, and with any sort of management that demand is not to be feared with the present strong holding in Wall-street.

From the Union Herald.

Considerable local excitement in a small way was manifest yesterday with respect to our City Banks. A large crowd collected about the Oneida Bank. The bill holders demanded specie for the notes presented, ranging in amounts from one to fifty doll
